DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

A photo in, "History of Caroline County," looks like a two story frame structure, like a church or school, somewhat Greek Revival in appearance, with corner columns and full pediment in the entrance facade.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

"At the close of the Civil War an effort was made by the Federal Government to provide in each section of the Southern states, a place where religious, educational and civil instruction could be given to those that had been set free. This structure - A Freedman's Bureau - was the one provided for this county as its part of the $1,500.00 used for such purposes. It is said that the lumber which was brought up the river for this building was intended to be delivered at Denton, but was put off lower down by mistake. The colored people have used the building continuously for both church and school purposes until 1910, when the school room was declared unfit for school purposes and a building in Pinetown secured."

THE BUREAU.

Many have inquired the origin of the building commonly called The Bureau, located on the state road leading south from Williston.

At the close of the Civil War an effort was made by the Federal government to provide in each section of the Southern States, a place where religious, educational and civil instruction could be given to those that had been set free. This structure—A Freedman's Bureau—was the one provided for this county as its part of the $1,500 used for such purposes. It is said that the lumber which was brought up the river for this building was intended to be delivered at Denton, but was put off lower down by mistake. The colored people have used the building continuously for both church and school purposes until 1910, when the school-room was declared unfit for school purposes and a building in Pinetown secured.
