Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The George Simcoe House is a contributing resource of the North East Historic District (CE-1525). Constructed between 1860 and 1877, the frame Greek Revival-influenced dwelling sits on a small lot at the northern end of the North East's commercial district. The three-story residence consists of a main block, rear kitchen wing of the same period, and two rear additions. The structure is covered with vinyl siding over original clapboards, has a low hipped roof, exhibits decorative eave brackets, and features a full-width front porch. Windows are original six-over-six sash with some original paneled shutters.

The George Simcoe House is recommended eligible under National Register Criterion C. The residence is an impressive three-story, Greek Revival-style dwelling that dates to the mid-nineteenth century. Its style is evidence of the prosperity reflected in the mid-century residential construction of North East. In addition to its height and size, the architectural detailing of the house makes is visually impressive. The Greek Revival-story influence in its architecture gives the dwelling a unique appearance. The George Simcoe House is an important, visually attractive structure with relatively little modern alteration.

DESCRIPTION:

The George Simcoe House is located within the NR-eligible North East Historic District (CE-1525) of which it is a contributing member. The house sits on the northeast corner of Main Street (MD Route 272) and Cecil Avenue in the mid-eighteenth-century Chesapeake Bay town of North East. Its location is at the historic crossroads from which the town grew. Constructed between 1860 and 1877, the frame Greek Revival-influenced dwelling sits on a 0.3-acre lot at the northern end of the North East's commercial district. The three-story residence consists of a main block, rear kitchen wing of the same period, and two rear additions. The structure is covered with vinyl siding over original clapboards, has a low hipped roof, exhibits decorative eave brackets, and features a full-width front porch. Windows decrease in height from first story (full height) to third story on each elevation. The sash are original six-over-six panes on all elevations with original paneled shutters only on the facade. The building's location, impressive height, and architectural detailing exhibit a commanding presence within the borough.

SIGNIFICANCE:

The George Simcoe House should be considered to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C. The residence is an impressive three-story, vernacular/Greek Revival-style dwelling that dates to the mid-nineteenth century. Its style is evidence of the prosperity reflected in the mid-century residential construction of North East. In addition to its height and size, the architectural detailing of the house makes it visually impressive. The Greek Revival-story influence in its architecture gives the dwelling a unique appearance. Despite the addition of vinyl siding over its original clapboards and its transformation into apartments, the George Simcoe House remains an important, visually attractive structure with relatively little modern alteration.

7. Description

Inventory No. CE-401

Condition

excellent deteriorated

 fair altered

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The George Simcoe House is located within the NR-eligible North East Historic District (CE-1525) of which it is a contributing member. The house sits on the northeast corner of Main Street (MD Route 272) and Cecil Avenue in the mid-eighteenth-century Chesapeake Bay town of North East. Its location is at the historic crossroads from which the town grew. Constructed between 1860 and 1877, the frame Greek Revival-style dwelling sits on a 0.3-acre lot at the northern end of North East's commercial district. The building's location, impressive height, and architectural detailing exhibit a commanding presence within the borough.

The George Simcoe House is a mid-nineteenth-century, three-story, frame dwelling with Greek Revival-style details. The main block, covered with vinyl over clapboards, is symmetrical three-bay with a low hipped roof and cornice brackets on each elevation. A full-width hipped-roof porch has chamfered posts and decorative brackets. Windows decrease in height from first story (full height) to third story on each elevation. The sashes are original six-over-six panes on all elevations with original paneled shutters only on the façade. The centered entry is formal with transom and sidelights.

The rear kitchen wing is likely contemporary with, or earlier than, the main block and would have given the dwelling an "L"-shaped plan initially. The gabled wing, on a stone foundation, is only two stories with decorative scalloped trim on the eaves and drop finials at the corners. Earlier surveys of the dwelling indicate that the rear wing had a central chimney between two rooms and may predate the rest of the house (Blumgart 1996:394); however, the chimney referred to is no longer extant. A two-story infill addition is located at the juncture of the main block with the rear wing. The addition is on an early concrete block foundation and has a low sloped (or flat) roof. Off the rear of the kitchen wing, a one-story shed-roof addition on a stone foundation wraps around the wing ending at its juncture with the infill addition. Following the conversion of the residence to apartments circa 1983, exterior fire escapes were added to the northern side elevation and rear elevation. Despite the addition of these exterior stairways, the George Simcoe House remains one of the most impressive and handsomest residences in North East.

Evaluation for:

National Register Maryland Register not evaluated

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance projects, complete evaluation on a DOE Form – see manual.)

The George Simcoe House should be considered to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C. The residence is an impressive, three-story, vernacular/Greek Revival-style dwelling that dates to the mid-nineteenth century. Its style is evidence of the prosperity reflected in the mid-century residential construction of North East. In addition to its height and size, the architectural detailing of the house makes it visually impressive. The Greek Revival-style influence in its architecture gives the dwelling a unique appearance. Despite the addition of vinyl siding over its original clapboards and its transformation into apartments, the George Simcoe House remains an important, visually attractive structure with relatively little modern alteration.

By the time the George Simcoe House was constructed between 1860 and 1877, North East had already been an important shipping and industrial town for well over a century (Johnston 1989). The town's location along the river and substantial natural resources provided additional successful industries besides iron ore production, which had spurred the development of the area. Other industries included milling, lumbering, fishing, agriculture, and firebrick and basket production. The town's location at a heavily traveled crossroads enabled the establishment of substantial nineteenth-century commercial and transportation-related businesses.

The Simcoes were a prominent family in the early history of North East. For generations the family owned large estates in the area, having settled there in the early eighteenth century. The Simcoes built some of the earliest homesteads, served in the state legislature, owned substantial properties, and conducted successful businesses. George Simcoe owned several properties in North East during the mid- to late nineteenth century, one of which was the highly visible lot at the corner of the town's main intersection of Main Street and the old Post Road (now Cecil Avenue). Originally part of his father's estate, George received full title to this property and several others from his siblings John S. and Louisa J. Manley in 1865 (WHR 7:749). On the corner lot, George, who was already involved in merchandising, established a lumber business that was in existence by 1858 (perhaps even operating the business prior to his father's 1854 death) (Martinet 1858). By 1877, Simcoe had constructed a large ornate residence on the lot that symbolized his wealth and status within the community. Near the end of his life, Simcoe moved to a farm at Bay View after selling his lumber business to his son William. William presumably lived in the house until George Simcoe's heirs sold the property to Samuel and Beulah Sturgeon in 1942 (WB 27:258). In 1983, the residence was converted to apartments.

The George Simcoe House appears in Cecil County's architectural history, At the Head of the Bay (Blumgart 1996:395). The property also has an outdated Maryland Historical Trust Worksheet and Nomination Form (of unknown date) on file at the MHT. On the form, the property was listed as the Beulah Sturgeon House, but no determination of eligibility was made (Ewing nd).
