Uniontown Academy

While Uniontown was settled by a mixture of German and English settlers, the Germans were the predominant group during the early years. By 1810, the Uniontown Academy was established to provide an English-speaking school in the community. A brick schoolhouse was built on land donated to school trustees by Dr. Charles Hubbs under a deed of trust that stipulates the English-speaking requirement. Hubb's name appears as the Reverend Dr. Charles Hubbs in marriage notices printed in The Engine of Liberty.

The school was incorporated as the Uniontown Academy under an act of the Maryland Legislature in 1839. In 1851, the present brick structure was constructed. The one-story brick building has a relatively simple design with its emphasis on the false-front stepped gable. This gable is accentuated by a tripartite stepped window in the gable above the door. The nine-over-six pane windows are quite tall in order to allow more light into the building. The window and door lintels have corner blocks that are shaped to form a point in the center. Also of considerable interest is the restored hitching rail in front of the building.

The school building has served various community functions throughout its history. During the late 1860s, it was the meeting hall of the Clay Lyceum, a local literary and debating society. A minute book of the Clay Lyceum is preserved in the Historical Society of Carroll County and shows that the Clay Lyceum debated such questions as "Is the mind of the female naturally inferior to that of the male?" The November 9, 1868 meeting minutes record that this question "was ably discussed by Dr. Shaw and Joshua Cain in the affirmative and by J. H. Christ and E. Appler in the negative, after which the President decided in favor of the negative."

In 1865, the county public school system took over the Academy building and operated a school there until 1880, when they constructed a new school. In that year, the county sold the building to Emanuel Formwalt, who used it for storage. During the last decade of the nineteenth century, it was rented to C. Sittig who operated a wheelwright shop in the structure. The property remained in the Formwalt and Haines families until 1971, when Mrs. Maud Stremmel Haines donated the property to Historic Uniontown, Inc., which maintains the property as a museum and community center.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Uniontown Academy is a one-story building of brick with a stone foundation constructed in 1851 and is said to be a replica of the earlier, 1810 structure. There are three bays across the front and three bays in length, with an A frame roof. The side bays are delineated by brick pilasters. The front of the building has a center door set in a simple wood door frame with a transom window. There is a window on each side of the front door rather large in scale, having 9/6 panes set in double-hung sashes with thin muntin. The window sills are unusually low to the ground. The windows in the side bays match those of the front. Set in the gable over the door is a tripartite stepped window, the center sash having four panes and each side light having only one pane. The white wood lintels over all windows and the front door are distinctive features in the red-brick building and are in the modified Greek revival style with rosette medallions at either end of the lintel. The most distinctive feature of the structure is the "false" front effect of the front gable end with its corbeled or stepped setbacks derived from a traditional Dutch style often seen in the false store fronts of western towns. This stepped gable is further delineated by segments of white painted wood mouldings along the top edges of the steps, capped with tin. There is a hitching rail of considerable antiquity remaining across the front yard of the school, effectively separating the shaded school yard from the village street

The interior is finished with plaster with horsehair filling, and has old, white pine flooring.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Known records indicate that in 1810 a brick school house was built on a quarter of an acre of land at The Forks, the original name of Uniontown. The site was owned by Charles Hubbs and the school paid for by private subscription. A year later Hubbs conveyed the property by Deed of Trust to five of the contributors among whom were such familiar local names as Daniel Zollikoffer, Daniel Cover and David Stem. The Deed empowered the contributors to meet annually to elect from the citizens who regularly supported the school, five trustees who were to manage the school for a year. It required that the school be an English school to meet the demands of the English-speaking citizens who previously had had to attend neighboring schools of German origin.

We know the names of several of the early school masters, B. F. Hubbard from Philadelphia taught Latin, advanced mathematics and branches of higher English as early as 1826 and attracted young men from different parts of the county to board in Uniontown during the winter in order to attend his classes. The school continued to prosper under Hubbard's successor, Mayor Alexander McIlhenny, and attained a high reputation and wide spread influence under Samuel A. Lauver between 1836 and 1850 when men who later held prominent positions throughout Maryland were among its students.

An act of the Maryland Legislature in 1839 incorporated the school under the name of the "Uniontown Academy". The original school house was torn down in 1851 to be replaced by the present red brick building of Dutch design. Private subscriptions continued to support the Academy until 1865 when the public school system was established and the county took possession of its building. In 1880 the county sold the building to Emanuel Formwalt. It was bequeathed to his son, Mr. Edward Formwalt, who in turn willed it to Mr. Frank H. Haines and from him it came to Mrs. Maud S. Haines, Uniontown's present benefactor.

In the late 1860's the Academy served as the meeting place of a debating and literary society called the Clay Lyceum which met every Monday evening from October until June and contributed

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Due to its relation to the one room school house (CARR 26 ~~26~~) this rail is of decided importance.

There are at the present time 4 squared wood posts through which an iron bar is run. Standing directly in front of said school house it may be safely assumed that it was used to stay horses while riders attended classes.

Few such 19th. century school houses retain such a once necessary item and therefore this one should be preserved intact.

Due to its neglected state steps should be taken soon to insure its preservation.
