CARR-192 3434 Uniontown Road
Isaiah Pearce House

It is also difficult to determine a date of construction for 3434 Uniontown Road from the land records. Its exterior appearance is that of a late nineteenth century structure with its gable front main facade, recessed entrance, projecting bay window, and bracket cornice window trim. However, Isaiah Pearce sold this lot to Samuel Cox for $307 in 1837. The small size of the lot suggests that a structure was on the lot at that time. The Cox family held possession of the property until 1850, when Jacob H. Christ bought it for $562. In 1860, Christ sold the property to Sarah Wright for $650, and it stayed in the Wright family through most of the nineteenth century. The structure is one of the more visually interesting buildings in the town. The asymmetrical facade is a popular Victorian period idiom that contrasts sharply with the symmetrical facades generally found through Uniontown. The projecting bay window, with its bracket cornice and paneling beneath the windows, and the design of the other windows with their bracket and dentil cornices are eye-catching features used to attract customers to this commercial property.
