CARR-313 Susan Brown House
3437 Uniontown Road

Like its neighbor at 3441 Uniontown Road, 3437 Uniontown Road is a nicely fashioned brick house that presents an assortment of mid-nineteenth century details. The land records suggest that it was built about 1861 by Susan Brown. This house reflects the conservative and traditional orientation of architectural style within the community in spite of technological innovations. The structure greatly resembles early nineteenth century Uniontown brick architecture in its appearance. Slight variations can be seen, however, in the vertical massing of the structure and design of the window sash. The four-over-four pane sash on the second story is atypical of Uniontown architecture but presents a balanced design. The wood dentil cornice is definitely a carry-over feature of the popular Federal-style from the early nineteenth century. Also, the rear addition formed under an extension of the roof is an unusual characteristic for Uniontown. The side entrance has a plainly detailed frame with transom. During the early twentieth century, several buildings used for a feed store business stood at the rear of this house.
