Fred Foster House
St. Michaels
private

c. 1850-1870

The Fred Foster house stands in a row of mid to late nineteenth-century dwellings on the south side of East Chestnut Street. The two-story, two-part house with a stepped elevation is a common house type to St. Michaels, and the exterior is finished with standard features such as the turned post porch, the two-over-two sash windows, and the sidelighted entrance.

Construction of the two-story frame house is estimated to date to the third quarter of the nineteenth century between 1849 and 1866. In 1849 Martha Ann Lane acquired this property, designated as "Lot 72," for an unspecified sum, and seventeen years later she transferred the lot to Charles Blake for $600. The significant transfer price in 1866 along with the mid nineteenth-century architectural features suggest the house was erected after 1849 for Marthan Ann Lane.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Fred Foster house stands at 104 E Chestnut Street two doors east of Talbot St. in St. Michaels, Talbot County, Maryland. The two-story frame house faces north with the gable oriented on an east/west axis.

Built around 1850-1860, the two-story, two-part frame house is supported by a minimal brick foundation and sheathed with aluminum siding. The medium pitched roof is covered with asphalt tiles, and the boxed cornices and extended eaves are covered with aluminum as well. The main house is a three-bay side hall/parlor plan dwelling, while a similarly sized three-bay section extends eastward.

The north elevation of the main block is marked by a side entrance with a partially glazed door framed by three-light sidelights and a single-pane transom. The adjacent two bays are filled with two-over-two sash windows. The second floor of the main block is lighted by three smaller two-over-two sash windows. The adjacent three-bay section is slightly shorter than the main house. A partially glazed door with a two-light transom marks the easternmost bay, and a pair of two-over-two sash windows light the first floor. The second floor is defined by three two-over-two sash like the main block. Stretching across the entire house is a turned post front porch with decorative corner brackets. A narrow brick stack rises through the roof of the center of the eastern section.

The west gable end of the main block is a plain wall of aluminum siding aside from a small square opening in the gable end used currently as a vent. A brick stove stack rises through the peak.

The south (rear) elevation follows a similar fenestration with a back entrance to the side hall of the main block. The door is topped by a two-light transom, and two-over-two sash windows light the first and second floors. A single story shed addition stretches across the eastern section of the house and six-over-six sash windows provide light on both floors.

The interiors of both sections have been moderately remodeled during the 1960s and 1970s. The principal stair has a turn of the century newel post and railing along with a decorated stringer. A slate mantel survives in the parlor, and four-panel doors provide access between rooms. The eastern section has been largely reworked as well, but a corner window stair remains in the kitchen, and a two-panel Greek Revival style door remains between the kitchen and dining room.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

SIGNIFICANCE

The Fred Foster house stands in a row of third quarter of the nineteenth-century dwellings on the south side of East Chestnut Street. The two-story, two-part house with a stepped elevation is common in St. Michaels, and the exterior features including the turned post porch, the two-over-two windows, and the side-lighted entrance are consistent features shared by neighboring structures. Similar to many St. Michaels dwellings, the interior has been moderately reworked during the last twenty years.

HISTORY AND SUPPORT

Construction of the two-story frame house is estimated to date to the third quarter of the nineteenth century between 1849 and 1866. In 1849, Martha Ann Lane acquired this property, designated as "Lot 72," for an unspecified sum (62/377), and seventeen years later transferred the lot to Charles Blake for $600. The significant transfer price in 1866, and the mid nineteenth-century architectural features suggest the house was erected after 1849 by Martha Anne Lane.
