Joshua M. Fairbank House
St. Michaels
private

c. 1867

Construction of this house is estimated to date during the ownership of Joshua and Josephine Fairbank, who purchased the Water Street lot from James and Louisa Seth in 1867, although the $500 transfer price would suggest that the Fairbanks purchased a house and lot. The SETHS may have speculated by building the two-story dwelling with plans to sell an improved lot. In any case, Josephine Fairbank held title to the property until her death, and the estate trustee, Oliver S. Milliken, sold the house and lot in 1928 to George W. and Catherine Jefferson. Martin M. and Ruth Evans Hubbard acquired the Water Street lot in 1939.

The house is a basic two-story, three-bay frame structure with a shorter two-story, two-bay wing to the south. Four-over-four sash windows with wooden louvered shutters define each floor. Although the building retains its basic nineteenth-century shape, the interiors have been reworked with the removal of most period features.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Joshua M. Fairbank house, known for the last fifty years as the Hubbard house, stands at 404 Water Street in the center of St. Michaels, Talbot County, Maryland. The two-story, three-bay frame structure faces east with the gable oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1870, this two-story, two-part frame house rests on a minimal brick foundation and is covered with a layer of vinyl siding. The medium pitched gable roof is sheathed with asphalt shingles. Attached to the south gable end of the main three-bay block is a shorter two-story, two-bay frame wing.

The east (main) elevation is an asymmetrical three-bay facade with an off-center glazed front door flanked by four-over-four sash windows that retain louvered wooden shutters. The front door is framed by a shallow pedimented surround. The second floor is lighted by three four-over-four sash windows, and the cornice is boxed. Rising through the south gable end of the main house is a brick chimney.

The north gable end is a plain wall with an extended eave, while the south gable end is largely covered by the shorter two-story, two-bay wing. Four-over-four sash windows with louvered shutters mark each floor. Extending westward from the two-story section is a kitchen wing.

The interior has been remodeled on the first floor with the relocation of the stair and the removal of any first floor partitions. The hearth against the south wall has been faced in brick. The second floor has been reworked as well with the removal of most nineteenth-century finishes.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

This two-story, three-bay frame house retains its basic nineteenth-century form with its stepped down two-story wing to the south. Four-over-four sash windows illuminate the each floor and survive with wooden louvered shutters. Although the exterior has been covered with vinyl siding, the house adds to the nineteenth-century row of buildings on Water Street. The interiors, however, were extensively reworked during the 1930s and 1940s with the removal of most period elements.

The construction of this house is estimated to date during the ownership of Joshua M. Fairbank, who purchased the Water Street lot from James and Louisa Seth in 1867,(73/435) although the $500 transfer price would suggest that the Fairbanks purchased a house and lot. The Seths may have speculated by building the house with plans to sell an improved lot. In any case Josephine Fairbank, Joshua's wife, held title to the property until her death, and the estate trustee, Oliver S. Milliken, sold the house and lot in 1928 to George W. and Catherine Jefferson.(214/71) The Hubbards acquired the house in 1939.(245/511)

By selling this lot to Fairbank, Seth breaks up the original Braddock plan of 60-foot-front lots. The burying ground (wider than the present Town property) extended to the southern edge of original lot 48. By selling 79 feet, the land bought by Fairbank extended across lot 48 and about 19 feet into lot 49.
