Earl Fields House
Bellevue
Private

c. 1900

The Earl Fields house belongs to the sizable collection of two-story, three-bay frame houses that define Bellevue village streets. Plain in decorative detailing, these houses were erected often by seafood-packing plant owner William H. Valliant as company housing for black workers. In time individual properties were purchased from Valliant by the residents who occupied the houses. Named after the current occupant, Earl Fields, this house dates from the years surrounding the turn of the twentieth century. The collection of turn of the century workers' housing in Bellevue is rare in Talbot County.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Earl Fields house is a two-story, three-bay frame dwelling that stands on the north side of Green Street in the center of Bellevue, Talbot County, Maryland. The two-room plan house faces southeast with the gable roof oriented on a northeast/southwest axis.

Erected around 1900, the two-story, three-bay frame house is supported on a low brick foundation, and it is sheathed with a layer of asphalt shingles. The steeply pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles as well. Attached to the back of the main block is a two-story service wing.

The southeast (main) elevation is a three-bay facade with a center entrance and flanking two-over-two sash windows. A screened in shed roof porch shelters the first floor. A pair of two-over-two sash windows light the second floor. The perimeter of the roof has slightly extended eaves with sloped soffits.

The northeast gable end is marked by an exterior concrete block stack with slightly extended eaves. The west gable end is simply finished.

The northwest (rear) wall of the main block is partially covered by a two-story, one-room plan service wing. An exterior block stack rises against the north end.

The interior was not seen.
