Mary Moaney House
Unionville
Private

c. 1910

The Mary Moaney house stands in the center of Unionville, a small village of black-owned properties in Miles River Neck, Talbot County, Maryland. The Moaney house is a well-preserved two-story frame dwelling evidently erected during the early twentieth century in two stages beginning with a two-story, two-bay house. Shortly afterwards an addition repeating the same size of original house was attached and a shed roofed porch was stretched across the new front. Supported on low brick piers the weatherboard frame dwelling has experienced few changes and contributes to the turn of the century historic character of Unionville.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Mary Moaney house is located on the west side of Unionville Road (MD 370) in the small village of Unionville, Talbot County, Maryland. The two-story, four-bay frame house faces east with the principal gable roof oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1910, this two-story, four-bay frame house is supported by a low brick pier foundation, and it is sheathed with plain weatherboard siding. The steeply pitched roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the back of the house is a two-story rear wing.

The east (main) elevation is an asymmetrical four-bay facade with a distinct seam down the middle of the house suggesting it was erected in two stages. A seam is also evident in the boxed cornice that finishes the base of the roof. The first floor is marked by four openings with the entrance located in the second bay from the north. A partially glazed door is flanked by two-over-two sash windows. Sheltering the first floor is a shed roofed screened in porch supported on square posts. The second floor is lighted by four unevenly spaced two-over-two sash windows. A narrow brick stack protrudes center of the house.

The north gable end is marked by single two-over-two sash windows on each floor, while the south gable end is a blind wall surface. The extended eaves are finished with short returns at the base of the roof. Rising from outside ends of the roof are original metal lightening rods.

The two-story rear service wing is extended by a south side shed addition. Six-over-six sash windows light the rear wing, and an interior end brick stack rises through the roof.

The interior was not seen.
