Charles H. Gibson House
Unionville
Private

c. 1912

The Charles H. Gibson house, more recently known as the Martha E. Williams house, is a small two-story, two-bay frame dwelling that dates to the early twentieth century. Its diminutive one-room plan with a one-room plan rear and its plain nature are features not uncommon to houses erected in black-owned communities during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

The earliest deed associated with this property was executed between James M. and Lida A. Cowgill and Charles H. and Sarah Gibson in November 1912. In later years Robert Julius Jackson and his wife acquired title to the property and transferred it to their daughter, Martha Jackson Williams in July 1946.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Charles H. Gibson house, known also as the Martha E. Williams house, stands on the west side of Unionville Road in the small village of Unionville, Talbot County, Maryland. The two-story, two-bay frame house faces east with the gable roof oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1912, the two-story, two-bay frame house is supported by a low masonry foundation, and it is clad with a layer of asbestos shingles. The medium pitched asphalt shingle roof is finished with boxed cornices and extended eaves. Attached to the back of the main block is a two-story, one-room plan kitchen wing.

The east (main) elevation is a symmetrical facade with a center entrance and closely set flanking two-over-two sash windows. The front door is partially glazed. Sheltering the first floor is a shed roofed, screened porch. The second floor is lighted by a pair of two-over-two sash windows.

The north gable end is a plain asbestos shingled wall surface with slightly extended eaves and short returns at the base. Rising through the south gable end is an interior end brick chimney stack.

The west (rear) elevation is partially covered by the two-story, one-bay rear wing, which is extended on its south side by a deteriorated shed addition. An interior end brick stack rises through the gable roof. Two-over-two sash windows light the first and second floors.

The interior was not seen.
