DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The T. Harwood Farm is set back from the west side of New Design Road, directly south of the intersection with Mountville Road, south of Adamstown. The large farm property contains two white houses, both of which probably date from the 19th century. Both are 2½ stories high and gable roofed. The northernmost of the two houses appears to be the main house of the complex, and is probably earlier of the two. It may have been built in at least two sections, judging from differences in exterior siding, locations of its two chimneys, and fenestration pattern on its main block. A smaller wing is located on the north end. The construction material is not known.

The main block, which is four bays wide, has a south end chimney and a second chimney located slightly north of center on the roof. The southern section, between these two chimneys, is slightly wider than the section north of the inner chimney. On the east elevation, both sections are two bays wide on the second story; a one story enclosed porch covers the first floor on this elevation. The south section's second story windows appear to be somewhat smaller and more widely spaced than the two windows in the narrower north section.

The second, and probably later house to the south is a three bay wide I-house, with central doorway and porch. A third house located to the south of this building is a modern ranch-style house. Outbuildings are located to the west and north of the two 19th century houses; a large bank barn is located directly north of the northernmost house.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The T. Harwood farm is architecturally significant for its two 19th century farm houses and its large bank barn. The earlier (northernmost) house, with its two irregularly-spaced chimneys and slightly irregular window spacing, is a vernacular dwelling which may have been built in sections. The later house, to the south, is a good example of the I-house of the second half of the 19th century. The bank barn is also a good example of its type, a characteristic barn form in this region.

The property is shown on the 1862 Bond atlas of Frederick County as that of T. Harwood and on the 1873 Lake atlas of the county as the T.N. Harwood property. Scharf notes that the Harwoods were among the earliest settlers of the Buckeystown district (Vol. I, p. 567).
