Henry Umberger House
Urbana vicinity
Private

Ca. 1847; ca. 1925

The two-story frame dwelling with german siding and a 1-1/2 story rear wing probably with a log structure was built by Henry Umberger between about 1843 and 1847. Three frame sheds located behind the currently unoccupied house were built in the first quarter of the 20th century. The house has three bays on the south elevation, with a four-panel door in the center bay under a three-light transom. The windows are 2/2 in plain architraves. The roof is covered with corrugated metal and interior chimneys are at each gable end. The main section may have been added in the late 19th century, although land records show that a structure was on the site by 1869. The main section may also have log structure, but this has not been confirmed by interior observation. The house is a fair example of a mid-19th century dwelling and is minimally significant in architecture.

The Henry Umberger House is a two-story frame dwelling with a probable log 1-1/2 story rear wing, built about 1847 with the frame main section possibly added in the last quarter of the 19th century, and three frame sheds built in the first quarter of the 20th century. The house is located on the north side of Fingerboard Road about three miles east of Urbana, Frederick County, Maryland. The dwelling faces south toward the road, with the outbuildings located behind the house to the north. A driveway runs diagonally to the northwest off Fingerboard Road, between the house and the sheds, leading to a non-contributing modern residence located west of the Umberger house on the same parcel. The house is currently unoccupied and, although the interior was inaccessible for this survey, it appears that the house is used as a storage building and one of the sheds as a dog kennel. The dates of the buildings are based on architectural details, historical maps, and land records.

The dwelling has a three-bay south elevation with a one-story shed-roofed porch. The exterior of the main section is covered with german siding and the rear wing has both german and pressboard siding. The roof of both sections is covered with corrugated metal. Interior end chimneys rise at the east and west gable ends. A third chimney is located at the north end of the rear wing. The windows have plain architraves and 2/2 sash. The center entrance has a narrow three-light transom and a four-panel door. The porch has plain square columns and deteriorated wood deck. The east and west gable ends have a single window bay on the first story and an attic level window. The rear wing has an integral one-story porch on the east side and a doorway on this side is flanked by a single 2/2 window. The north end of the wing has only two small 2/2 attic level windows. On the west side is a single window. The interior was inaccessible for this survey. Information gained from an interior examination may further clarify the building history of the house.

Sheds: The three frame sheds behind the dwelling all have vertical board siding and shed corrugated metal roofs. The northernmost appears to have been a stable or barn, with three openings on the south side. The middle of the three is a chicken house, with a pair of openings on the east side, screened with wire. The southernmost of the three is a garage with a concrete block foundation and sliding doors on the east elevation. This shed apparently is used as a garage and a dog kennel. All are in fair condition and were probably built in the first quarter of the 20th century.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Henry Umberger House is minimally significant in architecture for its apparent log and frame structure, being a fair example of a typical vernacular dwelling of the mid to late 19th century. The house was probably built between 1843 and 1847 by Henry Umberger, about whom no information has been discovered, although he was probably related to a John S. Umberger, a prominent farmer and a director of the First National Bank of Monrovia in the early 20th century. Land records show that Henry Umberger bought two adjoining parcels in 1843 and 1847 totaling 3-1/2 acres, for $70. By 1869, Umberger and his wife Elizabeth sold the property to Isaac N. Wood, retaining a life estate for Elizabeth. The sale price of $300 indicates that a structure was standing on the site and the architectural evidence strongly suggests that the present house dates at least from this period. The rear wing has the proportions and form of log wings seen in other mid-19th century houses, while the main section is probably frame, although this is unconfirmed by interior examination. In 1911, an equity sale of the property described the house as having 6 rooms and a metal roof, with a well nearby and abundant fruit trees. The existing outbuildings were probably built during the period 1901-1925, when the house was owned by Evan and Sarah Gray.
