DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Broadwater Chapel is located on the southeast side of Savage River Road approximately 3.6 miles southwest of its junction with Westernport Road in Merrill. It lies on a flat plain on the northwest side of Savage River with Big Savage Mountain rising sharply to the southeast and Jenkins Hill rising sharply to the northwest. The facade of the chapel points northwest, toward the road.

The chapel is a frame, one-story, gable-roofed building on a rusticated concrete block foundation. Its basic configuration is a one-bay by three-bay rectangle with a gable end facade. Four over four sash windows light the southwest elevation and two over two sash light the northeast side. The facade, pierced only by a door with a simple gable door hood, has a sign hanging in the gable that reads: "Broadwater Chapel, 1911." The southeast endwall has no openings.

The roof, which is covered with asphalt shingles, has boxed rafter ends with a plain board frieze below. An exterior brick stove chimney, is located on the northeast elevation and a basement entrance cuts through the foundation on the southwest side. The exterior walls are covered with asbestos shingles.

The interior of the building is a single room with a raised altar at the southeast end.

Two shed-roofed, concrete block privies of recent construction (ca. 1979-80) lie southwest of the chapel.
