DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The H. D. Eutsler houses are located some way south of Aiken - Miller Road, behind a small pond. The property is wooded and appears to be used as a weekend home. The site consists of two houses and a modern barn.

The older of the two houses is a one-story, gable-roofed log dwelling, measuring 22 feet 9 inches by 13 feet 9 inches. The house rests on a dry stone foundation and the logs are v-notched, chinked with small boards, and daubed with mud mixed with straw. The two windows are six over six sash, and the small door on the S elevation is constructed of vertical boards. The board roof is covered with tarpaper. On the E gable end of the house is a large exterior fireplace shouldered chimney, built of squared stones with a corbelled cap. The chimney measures 6 feet 7 inches across at the widest by 3 feet 10 inches thick.

The interior of the house consists of one room. The floor is of boards and the ceiling joists are exposed. Above the joists the ceiling boards are beaded. The fireplace interior is lined with brick and the lintel is a single slab of stone. The roof of the house is supported by butted sapling rafters.

The house is in extremely poor condition. The NE corner of the house is missing several logs and is supported by a column of cinderblocks. The house is unoccupied.

The larger and newer of the two houses is positioned SW of the log house. It is a two-story, gable-roofed dwelling with an asymmetrical four-bay facade. The facade points W. A modern one-story, shed-roofed porch covers the two southernmost bays of the facade and another covers two-thirds of the south elevation. A shed-roofed addition attached to the E elevation makes the roof a catslide.

The house rests on a high coursed stone foundation and is covered on the facade with green asbestos shingle. The S, E, & W elevations are covered with green painted weatherboarding, attached with cut nails. On the facade the windows are two over two sash, while the other elevations have six over six sash windows. All windows have plain mitred surrounds. The facade door, set S of center has sidelights, but does not have a transom.

The roof of the main block is covered with fishscale shingles, and the roof of the addition is covered with corrugated metal. The house has one exterior cinderblock stove chimney on the N gable end. The facade porch roof is supported by wrought iron posts. The interior arrangement of the house is unknown.

Southwest of the house is a small gable-roofed storage building, sided with German siding and roofed with corrugated metal.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The H. D. Eutsler houses are significant architecturally, the log house as an example of an early Garrett County construction type. This log house includes a fine large stone fireplace chimney, a feature that is no longer found on many remaining Garrett County log dwellings. This house makes up a part of a small district of log structures (See G-III-B-105, 106, & 107) in this area. The larger house is an example of a later Garrett County dwelling, and features six over six sash windows and plain weatherboarding, which indicate an early date for the house.
