DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Annie Zook Farm is located on the west side of Smouse Road approximately .3 mile north of its intersection with Bernard Road. The farm includes a dwelling, a barn, a chicken house, a springhouse, and a machine shed.

The house is a frame, two story, gable-roofed building with its facade oriented to the southeast. Its basic configuration is an ell plan with a four bay by one bay main block and a one bay rear ell. The building has a facade porch and rear shed addition.

The facade has an irregular arrangement: the first floor has four bays with two center doors; the second floor has three bays. Two over two sash windows light the building, however, there have been some alterations at the rear.

The building sits on a foundation of rock-faced concrete block. Its exterior walls are covered with white asbestos shingles on the facade and southwest elevation, and with grey "random ashlar" asphalt siding on the endwalls and rear. The roof has a covering of corrugated metal and a box cornice that extends partial returns to the northeast endwall only. An exterior cinder-block chimney is located on the southwest endwall.

The facade porch rests on a concrete block foundation and has five battered columns supporting its hipped roof. The shed addition covers the northeast side of the ell.

A frame springhouse and a machine shed are situated southwest of the house. Further southwest are a frame bank barn and a chicken house.
