HA-428

This stone house is located off Old Joppa Road at the end of a long lane. The house faces north and consists of several sections, all of which are covered with pink stucco. Louvered shutters are at each window of the house.

Most probably the oldest part of this house is its center section. This is three bays long, 2½ stories high. Walls are of cut stone. Windows in this section are six lights over nine. The principal entrance is in the center bay of the north facade. The tin covered roof in this section is gable flank and has a braced cornice. A gable front dormer is in the center of the roof on the north side. This section is one room deep. The interior measurements of this section (21' 4" x 16') matches those appearing on 1798 Tax Assessment. A date stone, present in the cellar of this section, reads 1785. A large stone fireplace support can be seen in the cellar of this section as well. This supports a fireplace on the west wall. A new kitchen has been added to the south facade. A one tier, flat roof porch is on the north. This has a box cornice. Columns are Roman Doric.

The east section of the house is one and one half stories high, and two bays long. Windows in this section are six lights over six. A gable front dormer is located on the north side of the high peaked, tin roof. A door is located on the south facade. The interior of this section is quite interesting. Walls are plastered and this plaster curves out from the windows. A large fireplace, brick lined and faced with beaded board, is located on the east wall. A closed string stairway runs along the west wall. To the east of this section lies a garage, built approximately thirty years ago.

The west addition of this house appears to have been built in the first half of the nineteenth century. This is a two and one half story, square structure, with a slate covered, hip roof. An elaborate dentiled, box cornice is visible. A corbeled brick chimney is in the center of the roof. A dormer is located at the center of each hip. Windows at the second elevation of this section are six lights over six. Windows on the first elevation vary. In the bay (closest to the center section), on both the north and south facades, windows are double hung, floor length, 8 light casement windows/doors. The south facade also has a set of very ornate, wrought iron steps. The next pair of windows are double hung ten light, casement windows. A set of ten light casement doors located in the center of the west facade extends and forms a sort of three sides entrance porch. A one tier, flat roof porch is also on this facade. Columns are Roman Doric.

The interior of this section is quite ornate. The first room has a massive stairway: A huge newel post and banister is supported by turned balusters; scroll brackets trim the stairway. Cornices are above all doors and windows.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The center section of this house bears a datestone which originally read "I Mason/Built AD/1785." A portion of the datestone has been broken through renovation of the house. It is difficult to ascertain who owned the property on which this house stands in 1798. Portions of the property were owned by David Lee, Jerusalem Miller, and Thomas Bond Onion, whose family once operated the Onion Iron Works. Information on the property assessed in the Gunpowder Hundreds during 1798 is scant and it is impossible to compare the measurements of the center of this house with any house existing in 1798.

The most elaborate addition to the house is the Federal style wing on the east. This wing is truer to style than many examples in this area. This is a blocky, symmetrical house with a low pitched, hip roof and double hung, casement windows common to this style.

A story concerning past inhabitants of this house is often told locally. The daughter of Quaker Ralph Sackett Lee, Sarah Amanda, eloped with Catholic John Walsh. Because of Sarah's father's unwillingness to accept this union, both household planted dense rows of evergreens to block out the view of each other's house.

In the second room (west room), a pale grey marble faced fireplace is located on the east wall. This has a marble cartouche. Moulded cornices are over windows and door and are covered with gold gilt.

Outbuildings on this farm include several vertical board barns, a spring house of stuccoed rubblestone having a overhanging wood plank roof and a tenant house.

HA-430

The tenant house lies south west of the main house. It is two stories high and is constructed of rubblestone and wood shingled frame. Windows are six lights over six. The house faces north. The roof is covered with slate and a corbeled brick chimney is at the inside west gable end. Two, one story shed additions are attached to the east side of this house.
