DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Dudeck farmhouse, located on the west side of Quaker Bottom Road north of its intersection with Webster-Lapidium Road, is a two storey tall, four bay wide, one bay deep frame structure dating from the early twentieth century. A one-storey, shed-roofed addition spans the rear (south) facade. A one-storey, shed-roofed screened porch has been added across the main (north) facade. The entire farmhouse has been aluminum sided in recent years.

The main block rests on a high fieldstone foundation due to the slope on the land. Similarly the rear addition sits on a high cinder block foundation. A corbeled-capped brick chimney is centrally located on the main section. All three roofs are asphalt-shingled.

The principle (north) four bay facade is defined as follows. On the first storey two entrances are centrally located flanked by 6/6 sashed windows. Two 6/6 sashed windows are located above the first storey windows. These second storey windows which appear as inset raised dormers are later twentieth century additions according to the present tenant.

The east and west gable facades are identical. Windows with 6/6 sash are centrally located on the basement, first storey, and second storey levels.

The rear addition is distinguished by four 6/6 sashed windows across the south facade on the first storey. A basement entrance is located in the second bay from the east corner. Two small windows are found to the west of the doerway while a 2/2 sashed window is located to the east.

Both the east and west facades of the addition have two 6/6 sashed windows on the first storey and a 2/2 sashed window at the basement level.

Various outbuildings surround house, all of twentieth century construction.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Dudeck farmhouse is a modest twentieth century dwelling well-sited along a hillside in Susquehanna River State Park. Although not as historically and architecturally significant as other nearby state-owned buildings (Land of Promise, Eightrapp, etc.) the Dudeck farmstead nevertheless is an example of a common building style of the early twentieth century.

Land records indicates that this 78-acre parcel of land was part of two larger tracts of land, Land of Promise and Eightrapp.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This building has been extensively altered throughout the years. It is built into a hillside and faces northwards, a long shed addition being located along the south side of the house, complete with cellar. The house is a two-story one, with aluminum siding over frame. Originally, the building was four bays by one, but with the addition, it is four bays by three. The foundation is a high stone one, due to the slope of the land. Most of the rest of the features of this house are new. The window sashes are 6 X 6 throughout. Two doors are side by side and located on the south face while a third door is on the ground level of the southern side. The asphalt gable-flank roof and the box cornice and eave trim are all of recent vintage. Two inset, raised dormers are stationed on the north face, these actually being second-story windows when the roof was lowered. A wall-length shed porch is also positioned on this side. The single brick chimney, original, is located on the interior of the roof.
