DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

701 N. Stokes is a rectangular, two-story, four bay by one-bay frame dwelling on a rubble foundation with a two-story wing running east along the north wall. At the rear the basement is fully above grade. The house, originally clapboard, has been recently covered with aluminum siding. It is located on N. Stokes St., facing west, between Ontario and Erie St., a block from the Susquehanna River and the canal.

It appears that the dwelling was originally L-shaped with the southeast portion added later.

Although the house has no porches now, there were until recently, shed roof porches on the front and back.

Window sash and framing are all new 6/6 light, double-hung. The entrance door is located in the south bay of the facade. Until recently, there were two entrances in the facade, the other being in the north bay. The roof on the main block is gable flank with narrow eaves while the wing roof, also gabled, has a long slope to the north. Both roofs, originally wood-shingled, are now asphalt. A small brick chimney is centered on the ridge of the roof of the main block. The present owner has removed all the woodwork and mantles in the interior. An enclosed staircase was located on the south wall of the ell.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE Reisinger House

701 N. Stokes is an example of a small 19th. century dwelling that has grown from an L-shape to a rectangular four-room plan. This type of vernacular style house with a central chimney, three or four rooms on each floor, no hall and two front doors was built at an earlier date of log or stone. There are many examples of this type of small dwelling in Havre de Grace, the Lambert Lodge Alley House (HA-818) being one example. The appearance of the house has been drastically changed by the addition of aluminum siding, the replacement of all the doors and windows, and the removal of both porches. However this house is in an area which retains much of the appearance it had when the Susquehanna and Tidewater Canal, was in operation (1839-1890). The canal and proposed park are a block from the house.
