Nathan Harkins House
1101 Walters Mill Road
Chestnut Hill vicinity
Private; unoccupied

ca. 1870

The Nathan Harkins House may have been built in the late 1860's by John Ward or Joseph Gorrell. Gorrell was the occupant and part owner of the farm in 1872 when it was sold to Nathan R. Harkins. The Harkins family still retains possession of the farm. On the 1878 Martenet map of Harford County, the house is identified as that of "S. Hawkins", probably a misspelling of Stephen Harkins, who also owned property adjacent to the farm. The Harkins House is a typical vernacular farmhouse of the last quarter of the 19th century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Nathan Harkins House is a two-story frame house with a rear wing and a shed porch built about 1870 in open farmland south of Walters Mill Road about 3/4 mile north of Chestnut Hill, Harford County, Maryland. The house is located on a small ledge in rolling hills. It is currently unoccupied.

The main facade has three bays with the entrance in the north bay, indicating a side hall plan. The doorway has a plain rectangular transom and the door itself has round-arched panels formed by molding. The fenestration is 6/6 and storm windows are in place. The shed porch extends across the entire facade and is supported by chamfered posts. The northwest corner post has been removed and is, at the time of the survey, lying on the porch deck. The rest of the porch has a scroll-sawn balustrade.

The slate roof is broken by a single interior chimney on the south gable end. A two-story wing with an interior chimney at its east end extends from the northeast corner of the main section. The angle formed by the two sections has been filled in with a one-story shed, including an enclosed porch. A bulkhead entrance to the cellar is located on the south elevation of the main section. The bulkhead's brick walls and gable frame roof with an arched opening are of more recent construction than the rest of the house. The ground slopes sharply away from the house on the south, exposing the stone foundation. The exterior of the house is weatherboard, formerly white painted but now weathered.

Down the slope to the south is a stone and frame springhouse with two levels. The lower stone level is the springhouse, with stuccoed and whitewashed walls. The upper level is probably frame with an exterior covering of formstone. A datestone reading "1922" is set in the formstone to the right of a door on the north elevation. The gable above the door is novelty siding. The roof is slate. Small 3-light windows are located in the east and west elevations of the upper level.

A group of barns and other agricultural buildings stands about 50 yards west of the house. Some parts of these buildings are probably contemporary with the house, but they have had substantial additions and alterations. They are still in use as agricultural buildings.
