Elmer Anderson House
1601 Fountain Green Road
Bel Air, Maryland 21014

Built on the tract "Cooper's Park", this farmhouse comprises a two-story, gable-roofed log section on the east and a two-story frame section with a center front gable on the east, with several more recent additions on the north and south sides of the log part.

The farm was part of the huge land holdings of Henry Dorsey and his daughter, Mary Farnandis, between 1846 and 1896, when it was sold to John Barnett of Delta, Pennsylvania.

The frame section, built after the log section, probably dates to the early twentieth century when the Minnicks owned the property. The arrangement, i.e. the old log section hidden behind a larger and more modern frame addition, is one of the most typical in Harford County. It was common in the second half of the 19th century for property owners to modernize their houses by adding a new facade and several extra rooms. This house, whereby the frame addition contains only one room on the first floor, is a particularly good illustration of this.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This frame and log house built in five parts is located on the northeast corner of the intersection of Fountain Green Rd. (Md. Rte. 543) and Prospect Mill Rd. The original two-story, gable-roofed section covered with clapboards is flanked by one-story, shed-roofed additions on both the south and north sides. Attached to its west end, the two-story gable-roofed frame section with a central pedimented gable constitutes the main or front part of the house. There is a new 1½-story stuccoed wing on its north end.

The two-bay by one-bay log section has an interior brick chimney in the west end and an exterior brick chimney on the east end. On both the north and south sides, the shed-roofed additions cover the first story. In the second story are two 1/1 sash windows in each side. In the east end is a replaced window in the first story, south of the chimney.

The front or main section faces west and has a one-story hip-roofed porch with square tapered posts that enclose the west side and south sides. Three bays by three bays, this section is covered in clapboards and has 2/2 sash windows with beaded trim, with four-light windows in the gable ends. The porch has square tapered posts and tooth ornamental trim. The east facade has an entrance in the first story center bay, flanked by a window on both sides. In the second story are two windows aligned with those in the first, and in the gable is a round-arched window. The south end also has an entrance on the first story center bay flanked by a window in each side. In both the second story and the gable are two windows.

On the north end, the stucco wing covers the east bay. Otherwise, it is similar to the south end except that there is no center entrance.

The interior plan of the log section consists of two rooms—one in the west and one in the east—with a winder staircase in the southeast corner of the east room. Flanked by one room on each side, the log section's ^{east} room has doors in three walls to the three adjacent rooms. In the west room, the fireplace in the center of the west wall has been blocked up, and there is a set of steps to the frame section in the north corner. In the east corner of the south wall is a door to the south wing.

In the second story are two rooms with slightly curved ceilings and beaded board doors. In the east room, there is a shelf in the end wall where the gable begins and the log wall ends.

The frame section has one room in the first floor with a two-run staircase with a landing in the northeast corner. The doors have four panels and plain, square-cut trim. The closed-string stairs have square balusters and a square newel post with a pyramidal cap.

Entered from the north side of the landing is a bathroom in the north stuccoed addition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Originally part of Henry Cooper's land, "Cooper's Park", this property was then owned by Edmund & Margaret Bull, who sold 67-3/4 acres and 27 perches to Henry Dorsey for $450 in 1841¹. In an equity case settling the estate of Mary Farnandis (daughter of Henry Dorsey), who owned a tremendous amount of property in Harford County and Baltimore City, the property was sold to John Barnett of Delta, Pa., for $1200 in 1896². By that time the log portion and perhaps the main house as well were in the property.

(The architectural features date the latter to the period 1890-1920.) Barnett soon sold the property to William and Sarah Minnick for $800 plus a $625 mortgage³. Between that transaction in 1901 and 1914, when Mary and S. Archer Minnick sold the property to R. Medrem and Ella P. Street⁴, the deed changed hands between several Minnick families as mortgages were negotiated and exchanged⁵. The Streets then sold the property to John and Effie Anderson in 1947⁶, who sold it to Elma Bower (later Elma Bower Blevins) in 1953⁷, who sold it in pieces to the present owner, Elmer Anderson.

This house farm is one of the most typical in Harford County: the four-room, gable-roofed log section hidden behind the larger, later frame section with a gable roof and central pedimented gable. It was common in the second half of the 19th century for property owners to update their houses by building impressive new structures on the front of the old ones, thus appearing progressive and the possessor of an entirely new house to the passerby, while in reality having added only a new facade and several extra rooms. This house is a particularly good illustration of this, since it appears to be quite substantial from the exterior and actually contains only one room in the first story of the frame structure.
