MASON-DIXON LINE: MILESTONE NO. 30(32)

1766 (reset 1902)

Whiteford, Maryland vicinity

Public/private

Milestone No. 30(32), an original crownstone, marks Mason and Dixon's 30th horizontal mile west of the initial stone at the northeast corner of Maryland, the beginning point of their 230.228-mile West Line, the longest of their survey lines run and marked to define the boundary between the English provinces of Maryland and Pennsylvania. The monument, first set in 1766, is an embellished oolitic limestone post with a low pyramidal top, and was quarried and carved in England. Originally measuring about 12" square by about 4½' long, it was cut to stand about 3' above ground. In 1902 during the course of the 1900-03 Resurvey of the Maryland-Pennsylvania boundary, it was reset to stand about 1½' high. The Penn shield on the north (Pennsylvania) side has been slightly disfigured by a large shallow chip out of the top northwest corner, but the Calvert shield on the south (Maryland) side is very clear and intact, as are most of the margins, fluting and top planes. There are chips along all edges, particularly the southwest, and corners, but the monument is otherwise in good condition, unaltered, and relatively protected in its obscure original site. On the federal and state levels, it is significant primarily as one of the series of 135 original monuments still standing along the West Line, commonly known as the Mason-Dixon Line since Civil War times, notable for its historical impact and innovative boundary survey methods. Locally, it is also significant as one of 17 original monuments along the present Harford/York county boundary (and one of only 3 crownstones), among the few and diminishing number of objects and structures still visually identifiable with our colonial and Civil War heritage.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Milestone No. 30(32) marks Mason and Dixon's 30th horizontal mile west of the initial stone at the northeast corner of Maryland, the beginning point of their 230.228-mile West Line. It is an original crownstone of 1766, in fairly good condition, unaltered, and at its original site, though reset in 1902 during the course of the 1900-03 Resurvey of the Maryland-Pennsylvania boundary.

The area here is rural, rolling farmlands interspersed with deciduous woodlands and a few orchards, with increasing numbers of houses strung along the main roads. The site is located ^{in a valley} /about 1 mile ^{northwest} /from the village of Whiteford, ^{which} /adjoins the south end of Cardiff, Maryland; about 1 mile west of the town of Delta, Pennsylvania; about 1800' north of Whiteford Road (MD 136); about 650' north of the remains of an old brick house ; about 150' inside the west edge of a dense deciduous thicket, close to an old overgrown east-west fence on the north side and a small stream just to the south. It cannot be seen from any road, nor easily from closeby, and is protected by its unobtrusiveness.

The monument, one of only 24 crownstones remaining on the West Line and one of only 3 along the present Harford/York county boundary, was originally quarried and carved in England, measured about 12" square by about 4½' long and cut to stand about 3' above ground. In 1902 it was reset to stand about 1½' high, with the longer length below ground and surrounded by a concrete collar. By the time of the 1979-82 field inspection, it remained much as reset, although there is now a very large shallow chip out of the top northwest corner into the Penn shield--a disfigurement noted at the time of the 1950 field inspection. The Calvert shield on the south side, facing Maryland is very distinct and intact, as is most of the fluting, margins and top planes. All edges are chipped, particularly the southwest, as are the top corners.

(see Thematic Group National Register nomination form for descriptions of the original Mason and Dixon monuments and the 1900-03 Resurvey method of resetting these)

SURVEYORSSTATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Milestone No. 30(32) is significant on the federal and state levels primarily as one of a series of 135 original Mason and Dixon monuments still standing along their West Line, commonly known since Civil War times as the Mason-Dixon Line, notable for its historical impact and innovative boundary survey methods. The site was preliminarily surveyed in 1765 and monumented the following year, where it remains to this day, although reset more securely in 1902 during the course of the 1900-03 Resurvey of the Maryland-Pennsylvania boundary. As one of only 24 crownstones remaining on the West Line, and one of only three within the present Harford/York county boundary, it is significant locally as one of a diminishing number of objects and structures with a visually identifiable relationship to our colonial and Civil War heritage.

A black and white photograph of a stone marker or monument. The marker is roughly rectangular and features a prominent, raised crest or emblem in the center. The crest appears to be a coat of arms, possibly depicting a shield with a crown above it. The stone is set in a field of tall grass and some weeds. A small, dark rectangular label with white text is placed at the base of the marker. The text on the label reads "M-D 30". The entire photograph is framed by a white border.
