The one story frame lodge hall has since been converted into a handsome dwelling house by descendants of the former members. Like other benefit societies in black communities, this one served the insurance needs of the community, as well as being a community center. None of these early 20th century societies are known to still maintain a lodge.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This one story lodge building has been moved from its original site and was converted into a dwelling and enlarged for the purpose. The owners, William and Florence Bell, recall the original appearance of the lodge and describe it as follows.

It was a small, one story frame building with its south gable end serving as the facade. The roof line was oriented north-south, and the facade faced Big Woods Road. The front door was sheltered by a small vestibule. The building was three bays deep, each bay containing one window with 2 x 2 panes. The building stood on a cement foundation. The frame was covered with German siding, painted white. A brick stove flue was built along the eastern wall. The roof was covered with tin. The grounds around the building were wooded.

The interior consisted of one room downstairs with a stage. There was no upstairs. The walls were sheathed with what William Bell termed "barn siding", known by others as "railroad siding" -- that is, beaded, tongue and groove, manufactured boards. The wooden floor also had tongue and groove boards. Lighting was by kerosene lamps.

The Bells moved the house from its original site in 1949-1950. Bell tried to move the house himself and has provided a description of how houses were moved. He had seen other people moving houses when roads were being widened or for personal preferences and decided to try it himself, rather than tear down the old building.

First he laid the foundation for the house at the new site. Next he felled trees on the property, carried the timbers to a sawmill, and had them cut into 4 x 10's and 2 x 6's. To move the house, he needed about five men to help him. He jacked up the house, freeing it from its original foundation. He constructed a gridiron of the timbers underneath the frame of the house, using the 2 x 6's for the length of the grid and the stronger 4 x 10's as the bottommost skids. These 4 x 10 skids rolled over metal pipes (about 2 inches in diameter) laid on the grounds.

The lowest three or four weatherboards were removed, exposing the frame. Large bolts were attached to the two cornerposts, and a cable run from them to the hitch on the back of his pickup truck. As he pulled the house, the pipes rolled, and as the house passed over one pipe (the last one), it was carried to the front by his assistance, and the process continued. However, he did not have enough power to move the lodge the complete distance, so he hired a professional housemover from Frederick named Kline. He had a large truck with all the equipment and moved the building without difficulty.

Upon arrival at the new foundation, Kline jacked up the house several inches above the level of the foundation. He laid 4 x 12's across the foundation, on which the pipes could roll, and pulled the house onto the new foundation. He then jacked up the house and removed all of the timbers and let the house down into place.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This building was the lodge hall of the Sellman Lodge of True Reformers which received this land from A. Clinton Brown and Anna M. Brown in 1909. (Deed 210/209) Later the lodge was reorganized as the Sellman Council No. 940, of the Independent Order of St. Luke, of Montgomery County. Many of the founding families of the post-bellum black community of Big Woods were members of this society. Like the Loving Charity Society of Martinsburg and Jerusalem, and the Odd Fellows Society in White Grounds, this lodge was a benefit society providing for the insurance needs of the community. The attached deed 252/308 gives the names of the reorganized lodge in 1915.

The present occupants are descendants of old families in Montgomery County. Florence Bell is a descendant of the Hacketts and Spencers of Big Woods and her husband's family is from Seneca. His grandfather, John Russell, had a house close to the Seneca Stone Quarry.

The Sellman Lodge of True Reformers

The building was altered considerably when it became a dwelling. The one large open room of the lodge was converted into a kitchen, dining room, living room and stair hall and constitutes the main section of the house. For the stairway, Bell removed an oak newel post and bannisters from a house that was being demolished. On the east gable end Bell added a 12' x 14' bedroom, and on the west a 12' x 14' den. He raised the roof to create an upstairs and added two gable dormer windows in the front and one large shed dormer in the back. Bell did all the carpentry work himself. He is a jack-of-all-trades. He is skilled in carpentry, masonry, plasterwork and also operates heavy equipment. As a career, he worked with Montgomery County Board of Education. He and his wife raised two children in this house.
