9. Description: This unusual house grew from a two bay log house into its present eleven bay dimensions. Constructed of log, brick, and frame the house first expanded to the east and later to the west. There are two porches on the north elevation: one at the east end and a two story porch which links the house to its kitchen dependency. The house has six-over-six double-hung windows flanked by green wooden louvered shutters. The house has three gabled roofs; the extreme east and west roofs are covered by mossy wooden shingles; the center gable roof has asbestos shingles.

10. Significance: This large 19th century farmhouse is associated with the Dorsey and Blunt families. Richard Thomas owned a large tract of land near Goshen and may have built the first log section of this house for a tenant farmer. He left this land (known as "Thomas' Hog Pasture") to his sons Richard Jr. and William in 1806, who in turn sold it to Gerard Brooke, who eventually sold it to Harry W. Dorsey.

One of Harry's daughters, Harriet, married Samuel Blunt in 1818. Harry Dorsey left his lands in 1840 to Harriet and at her death to her children, specifying that Samuel Blunt was to have no part of the inheritance. Harriet's son William took over the Woodburn estate at the death of his mother. He was a prosperous farmer with a house to match his position. By this time the original log cabin had been added on to many times, the latest being a large brick section. William's influence extended beyond "Thomas' Hog Pasture" and into the County. He was a member of the Montgomery County Agricultural Association and a part of the committee organizing the centennial celebration for the County. In 1863 he was a County Commissioner.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This unusual house grew from a two bay log house into its present eleven bay log, brick, and frame structure. The house originally faced south but is now approached from the north.

Built on fieldstone foundations the original two bay log structure was enlarged by the addition of an east brick two and a half story three bay wing and the original log section was covered by a brick veneer. On the north elevation it is possible to see where the brick veneer projects forward from the east three bays of the addition. A two story clapboard, three bay frame house was later added to the west of the house. The frame two story, three bay kitchen room has board and batten siding. It has access to the house through an enclosed porch on the north elevation of the frame west addition.

The north elevation has two porches: the east porch has a half-hipped roof supported by wooden posts. The west porch is a two story screened porch with a shed roof. It is enclosed by tongue and groove siding at the west end on the first level. There are three doors on the north elevation, one leading into the brick, one leading into the frame, and one leading into the kitchen dependency. All three are glass and wooden paneled doors. The south elevation has one porch located across the east (brick and log) section. This porch has a half hipped roof supported by chamfered posts. The south door has double wooden paneled doors surmounted by a four light transom.

There are six over six double hung windows flanked by green wooden louvered shutters. There are two gabled six over six double hung dormer windows on the north and south elevations. The gable roof above the brick (east) section has mossy wooden shingles; the gable roof above the clapboarded frame section (west) has asbestos shingles; the gable roof above the kitchen wing (west) has mossy wooden shingles. There are two interior chimneys, at the east gable ends of the brick and frame sections and there is one interior chimney above the kitchen wing.

The north (front) door opens into a central hallway that ends at the south door. East of the hall is the front parlor and west of the hall is the living room. West of the living room is the dining room. To the north of the dining room, at the northwest corner is a door way which leads into the enclosed porch. A door on the west wall of the porch leads into the kitchen.

The open string stairway in the central hall ascends from south to north. It has a simple square newel post, square balusters, and winder treads. The house has a combination of narrow and random width floors. The walls and ceilings are plaster over lath. A large hanging brass lamp with a frosted globe is suspended from the hall ceiling. The kitchen has built-in cabinets, tongue and groove wainscoting and a large iron wood burning stove. There are wooden paneled doors.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Woodburn/Blunt House is a large 19th century farm house which is associated with the Dorsey and Blunt families, two of the oldest in the County.

Richard Thomas owned a large tract of land outside of the town of Goshen. He lived in the Olney/Sandy Spring area, but may have built the first log section of this house for a tenant farmer. He is known to have been a builder. He left this tract of land, known by the appealing name of "Thomas' Hog Pasture", to his sons, Richard Jr. and William, in 1806.<sup>1</sup> They in turn sold it to Gerard Brooke,<sup>2</sup> who eventually sold the property to Harry Woodward Dorsey in two sections.<sup>3</sup> One of Harry's daughters, Harriet, married Samuel Blunt in 1818. Whether Samuel was ne'er-do-well or was the victim of a resentful father-in-law is not known; at any rate Harry did everything in his power to see that his estate and goods did not come into Samuel's hands. Any land transaction involving Harriet also bore a disclaimer to Samuel's right to the property. In his last will and testament Harry left all his lands in Montgomery County to Harriet and at her death to her children. He specifically stated that Samuel was to have no part of the land.<sup>4</sup>

Harriet's son William took over the Woodburn estate at the death of his mother. He was a prosperous farmer with a house to match his position. By this time the original log cabin had been added onto many times, the latest being a large brick section. William's influence extended beyond "Thomas' Hog Pasture" and into the County. He was a member of the Montgomery County Agricultural Association and a part of the committee organizing the centennial celebration for the County. In 1863 he was a County Commissioner.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
The house was originally a two bay log house which has had a three bay brick addition on the east end, at which time the log end was bricked over. A two bay frame addition (sheathed with clapboards) on the west end, was subsequently added to connect the house with the board-and-batten sheathed kitchen. The present facade has a central doorway with double doors below a four light transom. The brickwork is Flemish bond, with wooden lintels over the 6/6 double hung sash windows. The three central bays are covered by a one story porch. On the west end, the chimney is external with gable end clapboarded. On the east end the chimney is flush gable. In plan, the house has a central hall and flanking parlors. The staircase rises on the south side of the hall. The east room has a chairrail and fireplace with a columned surround supporting a shelf. The west room has a simpler fireplace. The second floor has a room over the east room and another over the west room slightly narrower than the room below. Across the facade there is a narrow room. From the west room an enclosed staircase rises to the attic. The west addition has two rooms above; the kitchen has two rooms above. The attic has rafters with mortise, tenon and pegged rafters. There are two dormers that have been cut through the front facade. There is a barn with a stone foundation and framed above. Next to it is a log two story building that was a dairy on the ground floor and a school room above. It is two bays with a gabled entrance to the dairy. The spring still flows through the spring house. There is a log tenant house with a stone chimney base and brick stack on the west end.
