The north interior end chimney is stone, the south interior end chimney is brick.

East of this house is a two bay by one bay, two story stone house. It has a north board and batten door and six-over-six double-hung windows. The gable roof has black asbestos shingles. There are two other outbuildings, both barns, built of fieldstone. The stone barn has the date "1836", engraved in the stone.

10. Significance: Far View is an example of a late 18th century stone farmhouse. Its plain solid appearance and beautiful view make it an attractive and significant house. A cellar under the house includes a solid room reportedly used for confinement of unruly slaves.

The land was originally surveyed as "Gartrell's Adventure". Basil Griffith married a Gartrell, and inherited the property. Reputedly the house was built before 1800 for Basil Griffith by the Gaither Builders. Basil and John Griffith owned the place until 1889 when John Griffith died, and ownership passed to his grandson, James T. Holland. He owned the farm from 1889-1898 when he sold it to Frances Marian Brown. She left the place to her son, James H. Brown and his wife, who was a descendant of the Gartrell family. In 1946 the house was sold to William P. Bundy who sold it to the present owner in 1970.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This six bay by one bay, two and a half story house is located at the end of a dirt access road, facing west.

Built on fieldstone foundations of uncoursed rubble stone, the house has two distinct north and south sections of three bays each. The north section has corner quoins. There is a one story frame lean-to addition on the east elevation. The west gabled porch is supported by two corner columns. The west door is glass and wooden paneled.

There are nine-over-six double-hung windows on the first level and six-over-six double-hung windows at the second level. The south section has longer stone lintels than the north. There are two small four light windows in the north and south gable ends.

The house has a gable roof. The north section has black asbestos covering while the south has black raised seam metal covering. The south interior end chimney is brick and the north interior end chimney is stone. A former owner covered the stone house completely with cement, which the present owner has removed on the south and east elevations.

East of this house is a two bay by one bay, two story stone house. It has a north board and batten door and six-over-six double-hung windows. The gable roof has black asbestos shingles. There are two other outbuildings, both barns, built of fieldstone. The stone barn has the date, "1836," engraved in the stone.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This is a large, long (5 bays) house built of local fieldstone. It appears that the structure was built in two parts. The north section is a three-bay part, with the entrance in the south-end bay. Merging with this part is a two-bay, stone section that has been covered with stucco. The house is built on a slope, so that the basement on the west side sits well above ground level. The entrance to the front door here is via an elevated porch that takes the form of a pedimented portico with barge-board trim. Windows are 6/6 on the upper level, and 9/6 on the first story.

There are several outbuildings on the farm that exhibit some of the finest stonework seen in the county. These include a slave quarters, or summer kitchen, built of rubble masonry, but with dressed quoin blocks on the corner. Also, like the main house, there are large, stone lintels over the doors and windows. There is a large stone chimney on the external (east) wall.

Beyond the house is a beautiful, English-style, stone barn, with exquisite masonry exhibited in the quoins, lintels and basement-level windows. The datestone reads 1836.

Far View

IN the eastern part of upper Montgomery County native building stone is abundant, and being on or near the surface it is easily quarried. The historian is thus impressed by the numerous stone houses standing in that area.

One of these, Far View, now covered with cement-mortar, is a fine example, and, like a number of others, was built by some of the Gaithers, who were the outstanding stone masons of the area for a century. But the Gaithers who built them, in name at least, seem to have nearly disappeared from the area of their early industry.

There is a rugged stone barn near the stone house of Far View with the date 1836 cut into the gable end. It is to the lasting regret of historians that few early houses have the dates when they were built cut into them. It is believed that the house here was built before 1800 for either Basil or John Griffith by the Gaither builders.

As the name indicates, there is an extensive distant view over the county toward the south and west from the site of the house, which stands on a hill just 500 feet above tidewater, overlooking the lovely Hawlings River Valley. Five miles north of Ashton, it is near Sunshine and is twenty-five miles from downtown Washington.

The land was part of an old grant known as "Gartrell's Adventure," the Gartrell family settling in this area before the Revolutionary War. Part was also on a land grant of 517 acres made in 1724 to Thomas Sprigg and Richard Simmons called "Gittings Ha! Ha!"

The first owner of which there is a record was Basil Griffith, born about 1775, who married a Gartrell, and thus inherited the plantation of several hundred acres. Following Basil Griffith came John Griffith (died in 1883) whose wife is unknown. Their children were John, Junior, who owned the place in 1865, Davidge, and Sally, all of whom died unmarried before 1891 and are buried in the orchard near the house. Another child, Nancy Griffith, married Charles G. Holland, and inherited the estate. Their son, James

Thomas Holland, then fell heir to the property and owned the farm from about 1881 to 1893, although he never lived in the old stone house, but for many years resided on the adjoining farm, Prospect Hill.

NO. 34 C-9 BASIL OR JOHN GRIFFITH
CA. 1790-'80 STONE, CEMENT COVERED

The next owner was Charles G. Holland II, who owned the property for a short time only, 1893 to 1898, when it was sold to the widow of Washington William Brown. From her it passed to her son, James William Brown. It is of interest to note that Mrs. Brown was a Gartrell descended from the first members of the family who took up the land known as "Gartrell's Adventure." Mrs. James W. Brown passed away in June 1959, and Mr. Brown built a fine modern home on the hill in the front part of the farm, and sold the old home to Mr. Wm. P. Bundy, son-in-law of the ex Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

An attractive old house with brick interior partitions, small window sash, fine mantels, old pine floors, and panelled doors, it has a number of interior features that indicate it may have been built before 1800. The center hall leads straight through to a terraced garden with old box bushes in the rear of the house.

Since the house is only one room deep, sunshine floods the interior from both sides. Handrail, spindles, and newel posts are delicately turned. The old slave quarters, a rugged stone building with four rooms and a large fireplace, stands only a few yards from the rear of the main house. A cellar for storage under the house includes a walled-off room used as a jail for unruly slaves. Iron bars still screen the window.

Fertile Meadows

THE attractive house shown is an excellent example of early architecture in Western Maryland. Part of the house was undoubtedly built shortly after 1800 although part may have been built about the time of the American Revolution.

The author has visited scores of Colonial houses in many states of the Union. In studying this authentic house he has been impressed with the sympathetic regard displayed by the present owners for its antique features. They have scrupulously preserved the charm of the old house. In their preservation of Fertile Meadows they have demonstrated that obliteration of such features is unnecessary to obtain attractive modern comforts and conveniences. Many priceless houses of early days have been ruined by their new owners who lacked regard for the antique. No "disenchantment of modernization" here.

From the lawn, lovely views are observed to the north, south and west, over the well named "fertile meadows," a name given the place one hundred and fifty years ago. The survey of the landscape is especially appealing if a flock of sheep are within view, usually to be seen grazing on the rolling bluegrass fields.

The land records dating back to Colonial days reveal the owners of this and some adjoining lands to have been numerous. On March 14, 1797, Edward Crowe obtained part of Benjamin's Square from William Willcoxon, and in September of the same year, Crowe purchased four additional plots totaling about 150 acres from Ignatius Pigman for the sum of 125 pounds sterling. The properties are identified by names of old grants as parts of Land O'Goshen, Pigman's Purchase and Benjamin's Square as well as Fertile Meadows. The several plots are stated to be contiguous to each other.

In March, 1803, Edward Crowe conveyed to Samuel Robertson 150 acres of land named Fertile Meadows. In 1809 Robertson acquired additional tracts from Samuel Howard and Josiah and Amos Willcoxon and others. Samuel Robertson owned a number of other tracts in the area. But before the year 1816, Robertson had passed from this life, for in that year the General Assembly of Maryland at its December session appointed three trustees to sell "the lands of Samuel Robertson deceased."

There is an undated tombstone on the slope of a hill not far from the manor house into which is chiseled, "Samuel and Rachel Robertson." Beside it is a marble shaft encrusted by age upon which can barely be read, "In memory of our children" followed by four given names, "Henry, Samuel, Maria, and —" the last unreadable. No dates on it.

The trustees named by the Legislature were Thomas Davis, William Robertson and John H. Riggs. On November 13, 1819, they conveyed the several tracts to George Washington Riggs of Baltimore. Fertile Meadows remained in the Riggs family for about a century until after the death of the wife of Remus D. Riggs in 1916.

George Washington Riggs was born at the old Riggs home, Pleasant Hill, near Brookeville, in 1777 and died in 1864 at his home, Woodville, near Baltimore. His first wife was Eliza Robertson who died in 1819. He then married Rebecca (Smith) Norris in 1820, widow of William Norris of Baltimore. She survived him by about four years. His son Remus Dorsey Riggs was the last child of his second marriage and he inherited the Goshen farm. The name Fertile Meadows was used by the Counselmans, present owners, from one of the old land grants.

George W. Riggs was an important and very successful businessman, first in Georgetown where he was a silversmith and real estate dealer, and in 1812 when he moved to Baltimore and established a mercantile business which engaged in the export of tobacco. He served in the war of 1812. George W. Riggs signed his will on August 8, 1862. It had four codicils added from time to time and was finally admitted to

IMPLEMENTATION

Once designated on the Master Plan for Historic Preservation, any substantial changes to the exterior of a resource or its environmental setting must be reviewed by the Historic Preservation Commission and a historic area work permit issued. The Ordinance also empowers the County's Department of Environmental Protection and the Historic Preservation Commission to prevent the demolition of historic buildings through neglect.

It is the intent of the Master Plan and Ordinance to provide a rational system for evaluating, protecting and enhancing Montgomery County's heritage for the benefit of present and future residents. The accompanying challenge is to weave protection for this heritage into the County's planning program so as to maximize community support for preservation and minimize infringement on private property rights.

THE AMENDMENT

The purpose of this Preliminary Draft Amendment is to consider the Montgomery County Historic Preservation Commission's recommendations that the following sites be designated on the Master Plan for Historic Preservation and protected under the County's Historic Preservation Ordinance, Chapter 24A of the Montgomery County Code. A copy of the Ordinance is provided in Appendix B of this document.

(NOTE: Unless otherwise specified in the Preservation Commission's nomination, the recommended environmental setting for each site is the entire parcel on which the resource is located as of the date it is designated on the Master Plan as defined in Section 24A-2 of the County's Preservation Ordinance. Where additional buildings of historical or architectural importance are associated with a site, these buildings are noted in the nomination as being part of the recommended setting.)

Atlas #	Site	Location
15/55	Spencer/Carr House	2420 Spencerville
-	Dating from 1855 with a rear section added in the 1870's, this three-story house is distinguished by three over three windows on the third floor and a one-story porch with bracketed pillars on the front facade.
-	Significant as an example of the "Spencerville style", a local style characterized by a special grouping of architectural detail most notably half windows on the third story extending into the boxed cornice and roof line.

23/66 Bordley's Choice (Merrywood) 20015 Georgia Avenue

- Began in 1763 and expanded circa 1868, this massive fieldstone structure today is most representative of mid 19th century Second Empire architecture.
- Associated in its early years with the prominent Riggs family of Montgomery County.
- Served for over 50 years as the home for the prestigious Brookeville Academy, a private school for boys started in 1815.
- The recommended environmental setting includes all outbuildings associated with site and the entrance drive to the main house.

Far View 21450 New Hampshire Avenue

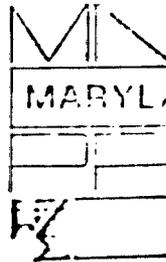

- Example of a late 18th century stone farmhouse of simple styling possessing a clarity of line and high quality of workmanship.
- Included in the recommended environmental setting are the 1836 stone bank barn and slave quarters, which are notable for the quality of their masonry work.

23/79 Roslyn Bank Barn 20401 New Hampshire Avenue

- Fine example of a 19th century bank barn with refinement of details such as the stone columns.
- Built in the 1840's by Henry Stabler, prosperous local farmer and eminent horticulturist who developed the popular Stabler strain of corn.
- The recommended environmental setting consists of the building footprint of the frame bank barn.

23/82 Grafton Holland Farm 2222 Brighton Dam Road
(Sunnymeade Farm)

- Ca. 1830 -- Frame and log farmhouse built in three sections with each section representative of the evolution of rural architecture in the area.
- Associated with the Holland family, influential land-owners and farmers in the Brookeville/Brighton area.
- The recommended environmental setting includes all outbuildings associated with the site.
