ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION

The property known as Brooke Manor is located on a 12-acre parcel of land at 16300 Georgia Avenue and consists of a 2-1/2-story frame dwelling, a pump house and a non-contributing agricultural equipment shed. The house, originally built circa 1862, was significantly enlarged and altered during the 1940s. Primarily a product of its rebuilding, the house is designed in a Neo-Classical Revival style characterized by a stone veneer, arched first-story windows, and a two-story pedimented portico with classical columns.

Exterior Description:

Set upon a stone foundation, the 2-1/2 story frame house is clad with a fieldstone veneer on the principal elevation and pebbledash stucco on the other elevations. Generally L-shaped in plan with a main block and two-story rear ell with additions, the dwelling is covered with a cross gable roof, sheathed in slate and asphalt shingles. There are four stone chimneys: two exterior-end, one each on the north and south elevations of the main structure; one-central, where the ell joins the main structure, and an interior end chimney on the west elevation of the ell. A two-story pedimented porch occupies the central bay of the front elevation.

The principal (east) elevation is divided into five bays consisting of a central entry with two sets of flanking windows on the first story and five sets of paired 6/6 windows on the second story. The entrance door, located on center, is well defined by its single door, fanlight, sidelights and panels. To either side of the door there are two sets of double, 6/6 sash windows, each fashioning an elliptical arched surround. Stone quoin detailing is visible on the corners of this elevation.

The second story features five sets of paired 6/6 windows symmetrically aligned with the first-story openings. Each pair of windows is capped by flat arches. Above these rises a flat fascia board cornice with boxed eaves. The half-story contains two gable dormers each with an arched, double-hung window.

The double-story entrance portico is set upon a concrete slab foundation. Four coupled Tuscan-style columns support a projecting gable roof, clad with slate. The portico features an open-bed pediment articulated with a lunette window.

The south elevation includes the gable end of the main block and the south wall of a two-story hipped-roof addition that filled in the intersection of the main block and its rear ell. The gable end wall features a stone end chimney on center, with flanking 6/6 windows. A single-bay, one-story, flat-roof wing projects off of the gable end.

The west elevation consists of the gable end wall of the rear ell, and a one-story, single-bay addition to it (a single-story, flat-roof screened porch surrounds this wing on its south and west elevations).

The north elevation includes the north end wall of the main block of the house, off of which projects another single-bay, one-story, flat-roofed wing.

Interior Description:

The interior of Brooke Manor is in deteriorating condition, and retains no pre-1940s detailing. Aspects of the historic structure are exposed in certain areas where the interior walls are missing. For instance, a timber frame post from the mid-19th-century structure is visible on the inside front wall of the main block, at the location of the front portico. Similarly, a portion of the exterior wall of the original structure is visible inside the pediment of the portico. This wall is clad with German siding.

Apart from these structural remnants, the interior is a product of the 1940s.

OUTBUILDINGS:

Pump House: Located southwest of the main house. Measures 5' x 5'. The structure is set upon a stone foundation and is clad with vertical board siding and is covered with a pyramidal roof. The roof is sheathed with slate. The interior walls are paneled with narrow, tongue and groove boards.

Equipment Shed: A non-contributing and dilapidated equipment shed is located west of the main house. It is constructed of wood and covered with a sloped roof.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Brooke Manor, located at 16300 Georgia Avenue in Olney, Maryland, was originally built circa 1862 by Roger Brooke, Jr. Roger Brooke, Jr. was the son of James Brooke, a large Montgomery County landholder, a Quaker and one of the founding members of the Sandy Spring Friends Meeting. During the 1940s, the house was significantly enlarged and altered by then-owner William Brooke Johns, becoming a stone-veneered frame structure characterized by a 20th-century Classical Revival portico. The property has strong associations with Brooke Johns, a recognized Vaudeville musician and banjo player and thus meets Criterion B of the Maryland Inventory of Historic Properties.

Historic Context

This parcel of land was part of the original land tract "Bradford's Rest." In 1861, Roger Brooke, Sr. died, leaving this property to his son Roger Brooke, Jr.¹ The original frame house is believed to have been built by Roger Brooke, Jr. circa 1862.² Following the death of Roger Brooke, Jr., in 1873, his heirs sold the house to Walter H. Brooke for $1,875.³ Walter Brooke, due to financial difficulties, sold the house and the 229.75 acres to George E. Brooke in 1874. The property was described as a farm improved by a "comfortable" frame dwelling and all the necessary outbuildings. The farm had an orchard and was said to be in "good farming condition."⁴ It was purchased in July of 1878 by James F. Barnesley for $6,935.43.⁵ G.M. Hopkins' Atlas of Montgomery County (1879) lists James F. Barnesley as a farmer in the Olney area and owner of 201.5 acres of land.⁶

James F. Barnesley conveyed this farm to his son, Charles W.

Barnesley in March of 1883.⁷ Charles owned the farm for many years. He finally sold it in November of 1925 to William Brooke Johns, the husband of his niece, Hazel Barnesley Johns.⁸ Brooke Johns was a star of Vaudeville and of the Ziegfield Follies as well as a banjo player, during the 1920's.⁹ He also had a radio show and a children's television show in which he appeared as "Uncle Brooke" during the 1950's. After his retirement in 1957, Brooke Johns involved himself in dairy farming, politics and the development of the adjacent "Brooke Manor Country Club."¹⁰

The Johns altered the house greatly during their period of inhabitation. The farmhouse underwent extensive remodeling during the 1940's. During this period of renovation, the house was covered with a field stone veneer, a front portico was added and the house was enlarged by several additions.

In 1989, William Brooke Johns conveyed the house and property to Judy L. Brooke.¹¹ In that same year, Judy Brooke conveyed the property to the Wayne Wallace Trust II, the present owners.¹² The property is currently slated for residential development. It is the owner's intention to renovate the house as part of the development scheme.

The James F. Barnesley Farmhouse is significant as an example of a mid nineteenth century vernacular dwelling which underwent extensive remodeling during the 1940's. The present dwelling is of the Estate style of that period, exhibiting Classical features such as the two story portico supported by large Doric columns, located on the facade of the house. The original two story frame house was probably built by Roger Brooke, Jr. about 1862.¹ Roger received the property after the death of his father, Roger Brooke, Sr. in 1861.² In 1873, following the death of Roger Brooke, Jr., his heirs sold the house to Walter H. Brooke for $1,875.³ However, Walter was forced to sell the 266 3/4 acre farm due to his indebtedness to various persons. The property was then described as a farm improved by a "comfortable" frame dwelling & all the necessary outbuildings. The property had an orchard and was said to be in "good farming condition."⁴ It was purchased in July of 1878 by James F. Barnesley for $6,935.43.⁵ The Barnesley family had farmed and prospered in the Olney area since the early nineteenth century. James F. Barnesley was a wheelwright, blacksmith and a successful farmer.⁶ This farm was one of a number of farms purchased by Barnesley. This one was evidently purchased for his son, Charles W. Barnesley who was conveyed the property in March of 1883.⁷

Charles owned the farm for many years. He finally sold it in November of 1925 to William Brooke Johns, the husband of his niece, Hazel Barnesley Johns.⁸ Brooke Johns was a star of Vaudeville and of the Ziegfield Follies as well as a banjo player, during the roaring 20's.⁹ He also had a radio show and a children's television show in which he appeared as "Uncle Brooke" during the 1950's. Since his retirement in 1957, Brooke Johns has involved himself in dairy farming, politics and the development of the adjacent "Brooke Manor Country Club."

The Johns have altered the house greatly during the time they have owned it. It underwent extensive remodeling during the 1940's. It was during this time that the original frame house was covered with the field stone veneer and the portico, etc. added.

APPENDIX A

SITES NOT RECOMMENDED FOR REGULATION UNDER THE HISTORIC PRESERVATION ORDINANCE CHAPTER 24A OF THE MONTGOMERY COUNTY CODE

The following sites have been reviewed by the Montgomery County Historic Preservation Commission and were found not to merit designation of the Master Plan for Historic Preservation. If not included in the Master Plan, these resources may be removed from the Locational Atlas and Index of Historic Sites in Montgomery County. If removed from the Locational Atlas, the sites will no longer be governed by the Moratorium on Alteration and Demolition, Section 24A-10 of the County's Historic Preservation Ordinance.
