314 West Montgomery Avenue

Built: 1887 Builder: Edwin West (presumed) Private

This 1887 cottage still displays the applied stick-work decorative detailing once common to Rockville's late 19th century vernacular buildings. It probably was constructed by Edwin M. West as a speculative venture in "R.T.Veirs' Addition to Rockville" with his sister Frances Green.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The subject house faces north on West Montgomery Avenue near the intersection of Wall Street and West Montgomery Avenue. While many trees and shrubs are on the lot, the eastern facade is most densely covered in shrubbery and trees. A graveled driveway is located at the west side of the lot, ending in an uncovered parking area.

This 2-and-1/2-story, gable-front-and-wing house is set on a coursed stone foundation and sheathed in asbestos shingle siding. The house has a rear, 2-story, hipped-roof addition at the southeastern corner that modifies the L-shaped house into a square. Asphalt shingles cover the cross-gable roof. There is a corbeled interior brick chimney located on the ridge of the rear gable and a brick end wall chimney on the west facade. The windows are mixed, with both one-over-one and two-over-two sash windows. Many of the windows have wooden louvered shutters on original hardware, and those in the original section have classical architrave surrounds. All corners of the house have vertical cornerboards.

This is a well-preserved example of a vernacular Victorian cottage reflecting the stick-style influence. The Victorian stylistic characteristics that make the house distinctive include the decorative stick-style patterns on the front gable eaves and those applied to the front porch.

The three-bay north (front) facade has single two-over-two sash windows on the second story and a longer one-over-one window in the first bay of the first story. The second bay on the first story has an exterior door with clear glass transom. A one-story open porch with asphalt-shingled, hipped roof projects from the wing and is flush with the gable front. It is supported by four decorative posts with trefoil-motif brackets. The gable front has paired one-over-one sash windows centered on each story. The gable pediment has slightly projecting eaves and decorative brackets. A stick-work motif decorates the pediment, and a floral detail is set in the central semi-circular attic vent.

The east facade has three bays. The first bay consists of single one-over-one sash windows with simple wooden frames and louvered shutters on each story of the rear addition. In the gable end of the original house's wing, in the second bay, are single one-over-one sash windows. A two-story tripartite hipped-roof bay projects from the gable end. The roof gable has stick-work similar to the front gable. Paired, one-over-one sash windows are in the center portion on both stories of the bay; narrow one-over-one sash windows are on either side of the bay on both stories. Projecting eaves with decorative brackets are visible below the roofline.

The south or rear facade has a rear gable at the southwestern corner separated from the hipped-roof rear addition at the southeastern corner by an interior wooden staircase. The former section contains a closed gable, with a screened porch supported by four square posts off the second story --the lower half wood vertical board siding, the upper half divided into four vertical screened panels. This porch extends over a cement patio and covers an exterior paneled wooden door with transom and screen door. A single one-over-one sash window is located to the right of the door. The rear addition has three, two-over-two sash windows with simple surrounds; a fourth, small six-over-six sash window is in the first story, first bay. These four windows have shutters typical of those found on the other facades.

The three-bay west facade has six windows in an even fenestration. These are all two-over-two sash windows that once had flanking louvered shutters. An exterior brick chimney rises between the first and second bays.

Interior

The house is divided into four apartments with a central hall and staircase. A turned spindle railing on the balustrade embellishes the staircase, with a cannon ball newel post defining the staircase's beginning and end. A decorative pendant drops from the staircase in the entry hall. Much of the interior has been partitioned and altered.

In 1942 it was purchased by Verna Vielt Kelly, wife of G. Lamar Kelly and daughter of a local businessman and Police Judge. 7/ At that time Mr. Kelly was serving in the U.S. Coast Guard after twelve years as a Rockville Town Councilman. He returned to Rockville and became Mayor from 1946 to 1952. 8/ Under Kelly's leadership Rockville would undergo its second building boom, occasioned by the post-war population explosion.

Before the house was sold to the Whalens in 1963, it was subdivided into four apartments. Since 1977 it has been owned by Chestnut Lodge, Inc., a private psychiatric hospital that utilizes the apartments as half-way housing for patients.
