3828 34th Street is a two-story rectangular plan frame dwelling sheathed with asphalt shingles and surmounted by a gable roof (see Slide #26). The roof is gable-ended at the north and south facades and is covered with asphalt shingles. The east (34th Street) slope has a centered shed roof dormer with a narrow 6/6 sash double-hung window. The first story of the main (east) facade is sheltered by an almost facade-wide shed roof raised porch covered with asphalt shingles and supported by plain Doric-style wooden columns. The south and southeast portions of the porch are enclosed by a wooden railing with simple rectangular spindles. There is a single wooden door entry at right (north) and a triple 6/1 sash double-hung window at left (south). At the second story above the entry, is a single 1/1 sash double-hung window. To the left (south) is a triple window identical to the one at the first story, but positioned slightly to the south of it. The north and south facades contain 1/1 sash double-hung windows at the first and second story. The east half of the north facade contains a single wood entry door at grade. The gable ends of the north and south facades are supported by two simple wooden brackets. The house retains an early character with the exceptions of the asphalt shingles of the facades and the small second story window of the main facade which appears to be out of scale and may be a modern replacement.
