

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #71B-2-2 Building Date: 1893/1894

Building Name: Frank B. Luers House

Location: 13125 10th Street, Bowie, Maryland

Private/Residence/Occupied/Good/Inaccessible

Description

The Frank B. Luers House is a tall cross-gabled frame dwelling, which stands on one of the original lots in the railroad town of Huntington, now known as Bowie. It incorporates features of the late Victorian style, and is embellished by a three-story corner tower. The principal facade consists of a one-bay front-gabled section with three-story pyramidal-roof tower adjoining it on the west, set back into the northwest interior corner. Entrance is through a six-panel door in the north facade of the tower. A one-story hip-roof porch shelters the north facade; it is supported by square posts with molded capitals, and originally had an open work geometric balustrade. The third bay south of the north front consists of a two-and-one-half-story cross gable on both the east and west facades. Extending south from the main section of the house is a two-bay-two story gable roof wing. The cornice is boxed with crown molding, and returned at all gable ends. The building rests on foundations of local ironbearing stone.

Significance

The Frank B. Luers House is a good example of a late Victorian frame dwelling with Queen Anne style motifs. The house was built circa 1893 for Frank B. Luers, son of Bernard Luers, who had immigrated from Germany in 1857, and in the early 1870's had settled in the newly established city of Huntington, working as a shoemaker. His eldest son, Frank Luers, began construction of this house in 1893 on a group of lots in Block 30, east of the railroad. The house was a fine example of late Victorian vernacular frame dwelling, with elements of the Queen Anne style with its tower, gables and projecting bay, which provided a variation in the lines and surfaces of the house. The house remained in the Luers family until 1947. It is a noticeable landmark in the town of Bowie, one of only two surviving examples of what was a popular and typical style of solid late Victorian vernacular domestic architecture.

The Frank B. Luers House is a tall cross-gabled frame dwelling, which stands on one of the original lots in the railroad town of Huntington, now known as Bowie. It incorporates features of the late Victorian style, and is embellished by a three-story corner tower.

The building faces north and fronts directly on 10th Street, one of the original streets of Huntington City. The main block of the house is basically two bays by three. Principal facade consists of a one-bay front-gabled section with three-story pyramidal-roof tower adjoining it on the west, set back into the northwest interior corner. Entrance is through a six-panel door in the north facade of the tower. Above the door is a two-light transom, and there is a course of decorative trim between casing and transom. A one-story hip-roof porch (screened) shelters the entire north facade. It is supported by square posts with molded capitals, and originally had an open work geometric balustrade.

The third bay south of the north front consists of a two-and-one-half-story cross gable on both the east and west facade. There is a two-story-two-bay shed projection from this cross gable on the west facade. Extending south from the main section of the house is a two-bay-two story gable roof wing. A one-story screened porch fills the corner between main block and wing on the west.

The original German siding of the house is covered with white asbestos shingle. Windows are 2/2 double hung sash, with plain board surrounds; there are no shutters. There are two small 2/2 windows in the north facade of the tower at third level, and one in the west facade. The cornice is boxed with crown molding, and returned at all gable ends. The roof is covered with green asphalt shingle. There are three corbelled brick chimneys: one at the ridge of the main block, one in the east plane of its roof, and one at the south gable end of the wing. The building rests on foundations of local iron-bearing stone, and, in some places, brick over the stone. The porches rest on concrete block foundations.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Frank B. Luers House is a good example of a late Victorian frame dwelling with Queen Anne style motifs; it is one of two surviving buildings of this genre in the town of Huntington, now known as Bowie. It was built by the second generation of a family which came to Huntington soon after its establishment, and has remained to the present day.

The house was built circa 1893 for Frank B. Luers, son of Bernard Luers. The elder Luers had immigrated from Germany in 1857, and in the early 1870's had settled in the newly established city of Huntington, working as a shoemaker. In the early 1880's, he constructed a large frame dwelling at the southern edge of the town (cf. #71B-12), in which he raised his family. His eldest son, Frank, worked with his father as a shoemaker, and married in 1884. Circa 1893, Frank Luers began construction of a house for his growing family, on a group of lots in Block 30, east of the railroad in Bowie. He purchased four lots from Edward E. Perkins and contracted with John Schaffer, a carpenter who was involved in the construction of many dwellings in the Bowie area.¹ The new Luers house was a fine example of late Victorian vernacular frame dwelling, with elements of the Queen Anne style with its tower, gables and projecting bay, which provided a variation in the lines and surfaces of the house. It was further highlighted by the geometric patterned railing on the front (north) porch.

Frank Luers continued to work as a government employee, and raised his large family in this house. Early in the twentieth century, he bought up more lots adjoining his home, residing there until his death in 1912. His widow continued to reside in the house until her death in 1941. The Luers heirs sold the house out of the family in 1947.²

The Frank Luers house had seen few major changes in the years since that time. It is a noticeable landmark in the town of Bowie, being one of only two surviving examples of what was a popular and typical style of solid late Victorian vernacular domestic architecture.
