

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #73-2 Building Date: 18th century

Building Name: Three Sisters

Location: 10408 Cleary Lane, Mitchellville, Maryland

Public/Residence/occupied/Excellent/Inaccessible

Description

Three Sisters is a multi-part frame house; the original gambrel-roofed house now has an enclosed porch across the south front, and additions on the other three facades, so that its original configuration is all but unrecognizable. The main block is a two-story gambrel-roofed building, three bays wide, with entrance in the third bay of the main south facade. This facade is now covered by a modern one-story enclosed porch. Set in the lower south plane of the gambrel roof are two small dormers with small 6/6 double hung sash windows, and returned cornices. There is a large exterior brick chimney at the west end of the main block, south of the upper ridge, a rebuilt version of the original massive free-standing stack. The house was covered with beaded board siding, now covered with asbestos shingle; the foundations are of brick and stone. Two modern gable-roofed one-and-one-half story wings now flank the original gambrel-roofed house; and a one-and-one-half-story gambrel-roofed addition extends to the rear. The additions rest on concrete block foundations.

Significance

The house at Three Sisters is an example of a very early dwelling which has been drastically altered and expanded. One of perhaps only three gambrel-roofed dwellings which survive from eighteenth century Prince George's County, this house was remodeled in the late 1930's so that its original character is all but unrecognizable. Secondary sources have long identified this house as the seventeenth century seat of the Hilleary family, but this has not been substantiated. The 1,050-acre Three Sisters tract was patented to Thomas Hilleary in 1683, but it is not certain when dwellings were constructed on the land. By the end of the eighteenth century, there were five small frame dwellings on the tract, separately owned by members of the Hilleary family, and the Turner and Williams families with whom they had intermarried. The property on which the subject house stands was the early nineteenth century plantation of Ninian Willett. After Willett's death in 1826, his property was devised to his three children, and then was sold in 1835 to John Beall Magruder. Magruder renamed his ca. 200-acre farm "Cherry Grove" and lived there with his family for more than 50 years. In 1938 the property was conveyed to George Cleary, who undertook a substantial renovation of the house. The massive freestanding brick chimney at the west gable end was dismantled and replaced, and the beaded board siding was covered with asbestos shingle. In recent years a one-story flanking wing has been constructed at each gable end, as well as a rear wing to the north. Only the gambrel roofline of the original structure hints at the antiquity of the house at Three Sisters.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Three Sisters is a multi-part frame house located west of the old Lottsford Road in an area now subdivided into large residential lots. The original gambrel-roofed house now has an enclosed porch across the south front, and additions on the other three facades, so that its original configuration is all but unrecognizable.

The main block is a two-story gambrel-roofed building, three bays wide, with entrance in the third bay of the main south facade. This facade is now covered by a modern one-story enclosed porch. Set in the lower (south) plane of the gambrel roof are two small dormers. (There were two similar dormers on the north side also; the easterly dormer has been removed, now covered by a one-and-one-half-story gambrel-roofed north addition). The dormers have small 6/6 double hung sash windows, and returned cornices. There is a large exterior brick chimney at the west end of the main block, south of the upper ridge; this chimney is a rebuilt version of the original massive free-standing stack.

The house was covered with beaded board siding, now covered with asbestos shingle. The roof is covered with green synthetic shingles; the foundations are of brick and stone.

Two modern gable-roofed one-and-one-half story wings now flank the original gambrel-roofed house; and a one-and-one-half-story gambrel-roofed addition extends to the rear. The additions rest on concrete block foundations.

None of the old outbuildings survives; there are several twentieth century sheds west of the house. On the grounds south of the house, and framing the entrance drive, are several old trees.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The house at Three Sisters is an example of a very early (probably mid-eighteenth century) dwelling which has been drastically altered and expanded. One of perhaps only three gambrel-roofed dwellings which survive from eighteenth century Prince George's County, this house was remodeled in the late 1930's so that its original character is all but unrecognizable.

Secondary sources have long identified this house as the seventeenth century seat of the Hilleary family, but this has not been substantiated. The 1,050-acre Three Sisters tract was patented to Thomas Hilleary in 1683<sup>1</sup>, but it is not certain when dwellings were constructed on the land. By the end of the eighteenth century, there were five small frame dwellings on the tract, separately owned by members of the Hilleary family, and the Turner and Williams families with whom they had intermarried.<sup>2</sup> The property on which the subject house stands was the early nineteenth century plantation of Ninian Willett.<sup>3</sup> After Willett's death in 1826, his property was devised to his three children, and then was sold in 1835 to John Beall Magruder.<sup>4</sup> Magruder renamed his ca. 200-acre farm "Cherry Grove" and lived there with his family for more than 50 years. (John B. Magruder was well known locally; he served on the Levy Court in the 1840's, and his farm gave its name to the nearby Cherry Grove station of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railway established there by 1910.) Cherry Grove was the home of the Fowlers and the Batemans in the early twentieth century and in 1938 was conveyed to George Cleary, whose family retains it today.<sup>5</sup> Shortly after George Cleary acquired the property, he undertook a substantial renovation of the house. A small south addition was removed and replaced by the present extended one-story porch, and the massive freestanding brick chimney at the west gable end was dismantled, and replaced. The beaded board siding has been covered with asbestos shingle. In recent years a one-story flanking wing has been constructed at each gable end, as well as a rear wing to the north. The Cleary's 97 acre farmland is being developed into large house lots, and the farm lane from the house to the old Lottsford Road has been developed into Cleary Lane which gives access to the modern lots. The old house stands on a 2-1/4 acre lot, which is highlighted by several ancient trees. Only the gambrel roofline of the original structure hints at the antiquity of the house at Three Sisters.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The house is a 1-1/2 story gambrel roofed, frame structure which has been extensively altered.

The main (south) facade has a three bay porch across its entire facade; there are two dormer windows with pitched roofs. On the rear facade, one of two similar dormer windows has been obscured by an addition; this facade has had its roof line altered so that it is now a straight gable. The chimneys have also been rebuilt in a modern style.
