Description:

The Phipps House was previously surveyed by Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission in 1974 and 1985. The house and garage remain unaltered in form since the prior survey. The exterior of the house has been covered with vinyl siding on the north elevation and the first story of the front elevation. The German-style siding described in the form, remains exposed on the second and attic levels of the front elevation, as well as on the south and rear elevations. The 1-story addition to the south elevation is covered with insulation. Not mentioned in the previous form is a gable roof shed located west of the house and northwest of the garage. The shed has a metal roof and vertical wood siding.

National Register Evaluation:

Constructed in 1908, the Phipps House is not eligible for the National Register of Historic Places. The property is not eligible under Criterion A, as research conducted indicates no association with any historic events or trends significant in the development of national, state or local history. Historic research indicates that the property has no association with persons who have made specific contributions to history, and therefore, it does not meet Criterion B. It is not eligible under Criterion C. The house is a common architectural type which suffers from a loss of integrity. The original German wood siding is being covered with vinyl siding, parts of the wood porch ornamentation are missing and a 1-story addition was constructed on the south elevation. Finally, the structure has no known potential to yield important information, and therefore, is not eligible under Criterion D.

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY
HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #74A-12 Building Date: 1908
Building Name: Phipps house (Railroad Era house)
Location: 15105 Mount Oak Road, Mitchellville, Maryland
Private/Residence/Occupied/Good/Inaccessible

Description:

The Phipps house (Railroad Era house) stands facing the Popes Creek line of the Conrail Railroad, approximately 35 feet west of the tracks. It is a two-and-one-half story, frame, gable roofed dwelling house, ca. 20' by 40'. The main facade is the east gable end, and there are flush cross-gables toward the westerly ends of the four-bay north and south facades. Entrance is in the second bay of east gable end; the door is surmounted by a single-pane transom. There is a one-story porch, supported by brick piers, across this east gable end; the porch has turned, bracketed posts. This gable end at third level is adorned by a tri-partite modified Palladian window: a central round-arched window (with small panes bordering the curve of the arch) flanked by square windows with a reticulated pattern of panes. The siding is German, painted brown, with white corner posts and trim; door and window surrounds are of plain board, and windows are generally 1/1 double-hung sash. The roof is covered with asphalt shingle, and the foundation is of poured concrete.

Significance:

The Phipps house is a good example of a modest early twentieth century dwelling house; it is distinguished by the somewhat unusual window treatment (modified Palladian) at loft level in the principal gable end. The house was built by Henry F. Phipps, a railroad agent for the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad. In 1907, Phipps purchased from the Franklin Davis Nursery a lot fronting on the railroad tracks, and his house was completed in the spring of 1908. The Davis Nursery Company had in the 1880's bought up large parts of Mulliken's Delight, the ancestral homestead of the Mulliken family, and it was from the eastmost section of this tract that Phipps' residential lot and several other commercial, railroad-oriented lots were carved out. This area fronting on the railroad at its intersection with the County road came to be known as Mulliken Station; it included a blacksmith shop, hotel, railroad station, post office and school. The Phipps house is the only one of these buildings which still stands.
