HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #81B-5 Building Date: 1894

Building Name: Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House (Burton Hall)

Location: 12002 Thrift Road, Clinton, Maryland

Private/Residence/Occupied/Fair/Inaccessible

Description

The Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House is situated five hundred feet south of Thrift Road, on an unpaved drive. The house is frame, square in plan, four-by-four bays with a gable roof. It is covered with horizontal wood siding, roofed with patterned tin, resting on a brick foundation. The four-bay north gable end has the entrance in the first bay, through a modern door with a transom. The three windows on the first floor are 1/1 with plain wood surrounds. Centered in the upper gable are two adjoining 4/4 double hung sash windows. The gable is sided with fishscale shingles and in the gable peak is a triangular design of square, recessed wainscot panels. A three bay, one-story hipped-roofed entrance porch across the main facade has a rusticated cement block foundation and bases of like material for the short, tapered wood roof posts. There are small, jig-sawn brackets between roof posts. The three-bay west facade has a high corbelled brick chimney at the roof ridge. The south (rear) facade is four bays with an enclosed hipped-roof first-story porch. The cellar entrance is through the porch floor. The house is in a rural area, surrounded by fields. A complex of deteriorating frame outbuildings including a large tobacco barn is north and east of the house.

Significance:

The Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House is patternbook house, built ca. 1894 for Dr. Edward H. Wyvill and his family when their earlier house on the site burned. The Wyvills acquired 350 acres of property ca. 1845 when Edward Wyvill married Caroline M. Hawkins. Wyvill (1812-1894), was a prominent local figure, serving as a Levy Court judge, a County Commissioner and Democratic Representative to the State House of Delegates. A diary written by a governess in his household details life at Burton Hall during the 1860's. Though rather plain in architectural detail, the house has characteristics of the Queen Anne style such as the shingled and paneled gable treatment, the asymmetrical east cross gable and the high corbelled brick chimney. The house plan was to be similar to plan #179 in D. S. Hopkins Houses and Cottages; Book #6. It was altered from that plan during construction and subsequently, over the years. At this time the house and outbuildings are in fair to poor condition. The property is rented by tenants but is still owned by descendants of Dr. Wyvill.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House is situated approximately five hundred feet east of Thrift Road, on an unpaved drive. The house is frame, roughly square in plan, four-bays-by-four bays with a gable roof. It is covered with narrow-lap horizontal wood siding, roofed with patterned tin and resting on a brick foundation.

The principal facade is the four-bay west gable end. The entrance, in the first bay, is through a modern entry door with a transom. The three windows on the first floor are 1/1 double hung sashes with plain wood surrounds. The two second story bays do not align with those on the first story. Centered in the upper gable are two adjoining 4/4 double hung sash windows. The upper gable is sided with fishscale shingles and in the gable peak is a triangular area covered with square, recessed wainscot panels.

There is a three bay, one-story hipped-roofed entrance porch across the west facade. The porch is on a rusticated cement block foundation and there are bases of like material for the short, tapered wood posts. The porch roof has a cornice with crown molding. There are small, jig-sawn brackets between roof posts.

Visible from the three-bay north facade is the high central corbelled brick chimney projecting from the roof ridge. There are overhanging eaves but no cornice treatment. The window bays do not align on the first and second story. A small cross gable over the first bay has the same gable treatment as the west gable end.

The four bay east (rear) facade has an enclosed hipped roof porch crossing the first story. An open porch with a corrugated metal shed roof was added to the rear of the enclosed porch. The first bay of this secondary porch is enclosed and stands on a concrete block base. It contains the bathroom. The partial cellar beneath the house is reached by steps down through the porch floor. There is a rear entry to the kitchen in the north bay. Windows on the second story are small rectangular 1/1 sash. There is a narrow interior brick chimney projecting from the gable peak.

The three bay south facade is a plain side gable. The brick foundation is visible from this side. It projects under the enclosed hipped roof rear porch. The porch has a 1/1 sash window. The projecting shed roof rear bay containing the bathroom is flush with the wall surface on this elevation, giving the first story elevation an elongated appearance.

The interior plan of the Dr. Wyvill House is basically that of a side hall and double parlor. The entry hall is along the north side of the house. The entry door faces a closed-string stair that rises for three steps along the north wall, turns 90 degrees at a small landing and rises along the east wall to the second story. The newel post is a turned cylinder on a high base block. The cone-shaped decorative knob has been removed from the top of the newel post. The balusters are turned, with upper and lower blocks.

There is a southwest parlor and a southeast dining room, reached through entry doors off the entry hall. A wide, 7-panel pocket door connects the two rooms. The kitchen is directly east of the entry hall, in the northeast corner of the house, reached through the dining room.

The second story has four bedrooms. The very narrow stair hall continues with the finished stair to the attic. The attic is a single room across the top of the house. It contains old baseboard and window surrounds but is finished with drywall.

The interior of the Wyvill house is badly worn. The plaster walls and ceiling are in bad condition. The wood flooring is worn. The multi-layer one-step door and window molding is nicked and damaged. There is some original baseboard with an ogee cap, and some plain replacement board. All original mantels have been removed from the house. A brick mantel surrounds the hearth centered in the north wall of the dining room.

On the exterior there is a complex of deteriorating frame outbuildings to the north and east (rear) of the house. North of the house is a large board-and-batten gable roof stable built in 1915. It has a lean-to addition along the east side. The standing-seam metal roof is topped by lightning rods. The building stands on concrete footers. Closer to the house on the north are two deteriorated gable roof one-story buildings with horizontal lapped wood siding. Closest to the house is the corn house, with a north end lean-to addition. It is constructed of hewn and sawed timbers. The hewn sill beam rests on low brick piers. Slightly farther north is a wheat storage building called the grain house. It is a roughly square building with a central east entrance of vertical boards with iron strap hinges. There are hewn and pegged corner posts. The sawn sill rests directly on the ground. Both of these buildings predate the ca. 1894 Dr. Wyvill House. To the rear of the house is a shed roof two-by-one-bay chicken house and a large vertical board gable roof machine shed dating to the 1940's. A large tobacco barn in near ruinous condition is far west of the house, standing in a field across Thrift Road. It dates to ca. 1860's.

The gravel and mud drive circles in front of the Dr. Wyvill house, which stands isolated amid open fields. There are no outstanding landscape features.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House is significant as an example of a patternbook house in the Queen Anne style, although it has been altered from its original appearance and plan. It is also significant for its association with Dr. Edward H. Wyvill, who resided there briefly before his death in 1894.

The Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House was constructed in 1894 for Wyvill and his family, to replace a dwelling dating to ca. 1845 on the same site, which had burned.<sup>1</sup> Both houses were called Burton Hall by the Wyvill family, who acquired the surrounding 350 acre Hawkins farm upon the marriage of Dr. Wyvill to Caroline M. Hawkins in 1845.<sup>2</sup>

Dr. Edward Wyvill (1812-1894) was a prominent Prince George's County resident, serving as a Levy Court Judge and in the 1850's as a County Commissioner and a Democratic Representative to the State House of Delegates.<sup>3</sup> He was trained as a physician but did not actively practice. He farmed his property and owned slaves valued at $3,730 in 1861.<sup>4</sup> A diary written by a governess in his household details life at Burton Hall during the 1860's.<sup>5</sup>

The contract to construct the present dwelling survives in the family's papers.<sup>6</sup> Phillip G. Miller and William H. Hatton contracted with Dr. Wyvill to construct the house, which was to be similar to house #179 in D.S. Hopkins' Houses and Cottages; a Collection of House and Cottage Designs, Book #6. The new Burton Hall was to be four feet deeper and wider than Hopkins' plan #179. The cellar of the original Burton Hall was to be cleaned out and the walls rebuilt for use beneath the new house. The bricks in the chimneys of old house were to be reused where possible for the two chimneys of the new house. The framing was to be taken from wood on the farm and hewed to proper dimension. Wyvill was to pay Miller and Hatton one thousand and four hundred dollars upon completion of the work.

After Dr. Wyvill's death in 1894 the farm was inherited by his grandson, Harrison Clay Ward.<sup>7</sup> According to Edwina Ward, great-grand daughter of Dr. Wyvill, who grew up on the farm, there have been several alterations of the dwelling over the years. The Hopkins design called for a one-bay entry porch sheltered by the overhang of the second story. The adjoining front parlor was to have cut-away corners on the main house elevation, so that the room was roughly octagonal in shape. According to Miss Ward the house shook in the wind and did not seem to be solid enough, so around 1916 the original front porch was enclosed to make an entry hall. The octagonal corners of the parlor were built out to form a complete square and the hipped roof front porch presently on the building was added. The rear porch was enclosed, resulting in the closing of an exterior window in the rear wall of the dining room. The bathroom off the dining room, projecting from the back of the house, was added in 1946. The original house colors were yellow with white trim and there were louvered exterior shutters.<sup>8</sup>

The interior of the house has also been altered. A decorative mantel in the front parlor was removed, probably when the diagonal walls were removed. The dining room mantel was replaced by a brick surround in 1965. There were also decorative mantels in the bedrooms which are no longer in place.

Several of the outbuildings which served the Wyvill house are no longer standing, including an ice house near the present location of the chicken house, and a cider house, located southeast of the main house. An osage hedge which encircled the yard and followed the entry drive down to Thrift Road was removed by Harrison C. Ward.

The Dr. Wyvill house has been occupied by tenants since 1975. It is still owned by heirs of Harrison C. Ward, decedents of Dr. Wyvill.

The Dr. Edward H. Wyvill House was built ca. 1894 for Dr. Edward H. Wyvill and family. This house replaced an earlier one on the site which burned.<sup>1</sup> Both houses were called Burton Hall by the Wyvill family, who acquired the 350 acres of property in 1861.<sup>2</sup>

Edward Wyvill, (1812-1894) was a prominent local figure. He owned slaves valued at $3,730 in 1861.<sup>3</sup> and was a southern sympathizer during the Civil War. A diary written by a governess in his household details life at Burton Hall during the 1860's.<sup>4</sup> After Dr. Wyvill's death in 1894 the farm was inhabited by his grandson, Harrison Clay Ward, and became known as the Harry Ward Farm. It is now owned by Ward's son.

Though rather plain in architectural detail the house has characteristics of the Queen Anne style such as the shingled and paneled gable treatment, the asymmetrical east cross-gable and the high corbelled brick chimney. At this time the house and outbuildings are in fair to poor condition. The property is rented by tenants but is still owned by descendants of Dr. Wyvill.
