DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Duvall tenant house, located on the west side of Crain Highway (Maryland Route 301) off a dirt road leading from the west side of Marlton Drive, is a one-story clapboard gable-roofed structure with a lower one-story, flat-roofed addition to the rear. Both sections of the house have corrugated tin roofs.

The main section measures three bays wide and one bay deep. The main (east) facade is defined by a centrally located doorway flanked by asymmetrically placed window openings. Although the windows themselves no longer exist, they most probably were originally 6/6 double-hung sash. Both the door and windows are framed by plain timber surrounds. A one-story open porch with simple 2x4 wooden supports spans this facade. The north and south gable end facades are distinguished only by a window opening at the attic level. These windows, also once 6/6 double-hung sash, share the same simple timber surround detail with the openings of the main facade.

The small rear addition is one bay wide and one bay deep. A secondary entrance is located on the south facade. A standing seam tin shed roof supported by 2x4 timber uprights shelters this entrance. A window opening with a plain wooden surround appears in both the north and west facades of this section.

Brick chimneys are centrally located in both the main block and the addition. Both sections and the porch rest on brick foundation piers. A hand hewn peg sill is visible under the north gable facade.

The interior plan is a typical hall and parlor arrangement with little architecture detail noticeable in any of the rooms. A stairway is located along the southern gable end which leads to an unfinished attic sleeping area. The rear addition is partitioned into two rooms, the northernmost one functioning once as a kitchen.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Duvall tenant house, probably built by William Duvall, Sr., in the first quarter of the Twentieth Century is a typical example of the unassuming tenant dwellings that once populated the area in the early Twentieth Century. This abandoned frame dwelling sits on a tract of land formerly owned by the Duvall family. The property also includes two tobacco barns, a collection of dairy outbuildings, a second tenant house constructed by Peter Wood Duvall, Sr., in the second quarter of the Twentieth Century, as well as a now isolated Civil-War-era tobacco barn.¹ Together they represent a once modest yet diversified tenant farm which produced a variety of corns, sundry grains, tobacco and dairy products in its more active days. The farm's rich fertile soils, gentle rolling pasture and crop lands, and available water supply from the Charles Branch rendered this area choice farmland.

This tract of land, referred to as "Little Mt. Airy", in a 1938 deed (Prince George's County land record 498/483) belonged to various members of the Duvall family since 1876 when it was awarded to Benjamin and George Duvall in an equity settlement. Previously, the property was part of the Thomas Sasscer farm. It is uncertain as to why this parcel of land became the focus of an equity dispute (Prince George's County equity case #1001) between Benjamin F., his wife Susan Sasscer (Thomas' daughter) and others as complainants, and John Thomas Sasscer (Thomas' son) and others as defendants. These interfamily disputes, however, were common throughout the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries.

Relevant to this discussion, however, is that these land records and equity papers indicate structures which no longer stand on the property. The Hopkins Atlas of 1878 confirms this fact. Through conversations with Peter Wood Duvall (who sold this tract to DNR) and his son, Peter, Jr., it was learned that foundations of a structure exist opposite the Duvall tenant house, that a nearby second tenant house was built circa 1940 on earlier foundations of a house whose construction date is uncertain, and finally, that old bricks have often been found through constant plowing of the fields not far from the older tobacco barn. Perhaps archeological investigations would yield some information on these missing structures.

This is a small, one-story frame tenant house. The main (south) facade is of 3 bays, with a central door that is flanked by two 6/6 windows. An open, one-story porch crosses the front. Like the main roof, it is of tin. The house has old clapboard siding, and it appears there is a stove-chimney near the center of the roof.

This is an excellent example of the now-rare tenant dwellings, that were once so numerous on area tobacco farms. Appears to have been a Sasscer farm at one time.
