c. 1890

The Daniel Miles' Store is a simple single-story frame structure standing in the center of Upper Fairmount across the road from Cecil Ford's Store. In addition to a small merchandise business, this building once housed the Fairmount Post Office. It is one of two store buildings in the village, although it has stood unused for several years.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Daniel Miles' Store is a c. 1890 single-story three-bay frame structure standing on the south side of Md. 361 in Upper Fairmount, Maryland. The gable-front structure rests on a brick pier foundation and is sheathed with asbestos siding. The medium sloped roof is sheathed with asphalt tile shingles. A shed roof addition extends to the east of the main block. Piercing the roof is a small brick stove stack.

The main block is divided into three bays with a center door flanked by 2/2 sash windows. A gabled stoop covers the entrance. The attic level is pierced by a 2/2 sash window. Located to the left is a separate entrance into the shed room which was once used as a post office. The glazed door has iron bars. A 2/2 sash window is located to the left of the door.

The remaining three sides are finished in a similar manner with no unusual details. The interior was not seen.
