The uptown branch of the Bank of Crisfield (later renamed the Eastern Shore National Bank) formerly occupied this simplified Art Deco style building erected in 1937 in the center business district that had been destroyed by fire nine years earlier. The Art Deco design of the bank front is very plain with only basic references to an often elaborate linear style. The vertical emphasis expressed in the tall brick panels and the recessed entrance bay along with the decorative door handles are the clear architectural references that pinpoint the design inspiration.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Old Bank of Crisfield in its uptown location stands on the north side of West Main Street within the central business district. The two-story cream-brick building faces south.

The dated 1937 two-story stretcher bond brick bank was designed with a simplified Art Deco design. A center double-door entrance, with Art Deco style handle plates along with a large tri-partite window above it, is recessed from the front wall surface. Flanking the entrance are narrow brick wall surfaces which rise above the window level. Small, rectangular single pane windows pierce the side wall at the first floor level. Fixed to the wall below the east window is a bronze plaque embossed with "Eastern Shore National Bank." The center bay and upper portion of the bank front are recessed slightly from the surface of the side panels, and the top of the bank is stepped back two levels. Set into the brick wall is the name, "BANK OF CRISFIELD, 1893-1937, UP-TOWN BRANCH." The upper ledges of the stepped front as well as the window sills are of limestone.

The bank is fully covered on the east side by the Saltz Furniture Store, but an alley way separates neighboring Scher's Clothing Store from the bank. On the west wall a distinct change is visible from the cream-colored brick of the front and the red brick walls of the main body of the building.

This branch has been closed so an interior description was not possible on the initial visit.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The uptown branch of the Bank of Crisfield (later renamed the Eastern Shore National Bank) occupied a simplified Art Deco style building erected in 1937 in the center business district destroyed by fire in 1928. The Art Deco design of the bank front is very plain with only basic stylistic references to often elaborate style. The vertical emphasis in the tall recessed entrance bay and the flanking side panels as well as the linear decoration of the door handles are the clear architectural features that pinpoint the design inspiration. The interior was undoubtedly finished with more elaborate Art Deco style elements.
