Tice-Eby Farm

Hagerstown Vicinity

private

18th Century

The Tice-Eby farm is an 18th century rural complex which derives significance from its architecture and from its contribution to local agricultural history. The house is a two story, four bay log structure with two front doors placed side by side in the front elevation, a prominent regional type of the 18th and 19th centuries. The actual construction date for this house has not been discovered. The barn is important, if the year 1774, inscribed in a tablet in its north end wall is correct, as one of the oldest dated barns in Washington County. It is a stone structure, a bank barn, as are most barns in the Cumberland Valley. Bank barns have a ramp or bank at the back which provides access to the upper level. The appearance of this structure is consistent with other 18th century stone barns in Washington County.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farm group is located along a private lane which extends in a southerly direction from Broadfording Road about four miles west of Hagerstown in Washington County, Maryland. The house is situated on a rise of ground above the south bank of a small creek, Rush Run and faces east. Behind the house is a large stone bank barn which faces west.

The dwelling is a two story, four bay log structure resting on stone foundations and sheathed with German siding. A two story, two bay frame addition extends to the rear.

Windows and doors in the main section are placed at random in the walls and appear relatively small in relation to wall area. Windows have two over two pane Victorian period sashes around which run architraves with pointed top pieces which appear to date from the late 19th century. One window in the north end wall seems to have been enlarged and has a later style of architrave with a flat top piece. Windows in the addition are larger and also have two over two sashes. They are trimmed with flat topped architraves.

Entrances are located in the two central bays of the front elevation. Both appear to be treated similarly with trim matching that of the windows. A hipped roof early 20th century porch shelters both entrances.

The roof is sheathed with sheet metal and extends beyond the end walls of the house. A small brick chimney is located inside the north end wall and another is seen inside the end wall of the ell.

The stone barn located behind the house is constructed of coursed native limestone. Placed at intervals in the walls are narrow vertical slits for ventilation. Wooden louvered ventilators are also present, held within frames joined with wooden pins. Some of these openings are topped with stylized stone keystones. These ventilators may not be original to the structure.

High in its north end wall is a circular indentation filled with what appears to be concrete. Below it is an arch topped date tablet rimmed with finely cut stone. Written in new concrete apparently replacing the original plaque is the name G. W. Tice and the date 1774. If this inscription is correct, this building is one of the oldest dated stone barns remaining in Washington County.

Near the house is a stone and frame springhouse with a wood shingle roof.

The buildings appear to be in excellent condition and stand on a farm containing 83.75 acres.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Tice-Eby farm is an 18th century rural complex which derives significance from its architecture and from its contribution to local agricultural history. The house is a two story, four bay log structure with two front doors placed side by side in the front elevation, a prominent regional type of the 18th and 19th centuries. The actual construction date for this house has not been discovered. The barn is important, if the year 1774, inscribed in a tablet in its north end wall is correct, as one of the oldest dated barns in Washington County. It is a stone structure, a bank barn, as are most barns in the Cumberland Valley. Bank barns have a ramp or bank at the back which provides access to the upper level. The appearance of this structure is consistent with other 18th century stone barns in Washington County.

The name G. W. Tice inscribed in the date stone suggests that the farm was owned by that family from an early date. According to Washington County Land Records, the executors for John Tice who died in 1868, sold the farm, then containing about 132 acres to Jacob Martin in 1871 (WMcKK4/97). The tract included parts of the land grants "Baker's Purchase," "Addition to Baker's Purchase, " Bachelor's Delight" and "Resurvey on Contentment. " The farm changed hands numerous times during the late 19th and 20th centuries.
