DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If Known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE.

Rose Hill is located on the west side of Maryland Route 63, one half mile south of Williamsport, Maryland.

Rose Hill is a six bay, two story, Flemish bond brick house. It has a hip roof and a "widow's walk."

A pedimented pavillion that extends outward from the wall plane comprises the two central bays. A small elliptical window sits in the pediment.

The windows have six over six sashes and flat stone arches with keystones. The basement windows have flat brick arches. There is a wooden belt course (20th century) and a simple cornice.

The main entrance, centered in the pavillion, has a semi-circular fanlight with lead tracery that is Federal in feeling. A brick arch surrounds the fanlight. A pair of rectangular, three-pane side lights and the door support the fanlight.

A four bay, two story wing of a smaller scale extends out from one side of the house.

On the interior, Rose Hill is noted for its large center hall and the attached hanging staircase. The interior details, e.g., the entablatures over the first floor doors, reflect the taste of the Adam-inspired Federal period.

Other Maryland houses such as Montpelier (National Register) and Tulip Hill (National Register) have facades similar to Rose Hill's. These buildings, however, are in southern and central Maryland. Rose Hill is the outpost of this type of architecture in Western Maryland.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Rose Hill, near Williamsport, Maryland, is one of the finest Federal period houses in the western part of the state. In addition, it ranks with the best Federal buildings in central and southern Maryland. Buildings of contemporary period and with a similar degree of architectural refinement are virtually non-existent in Washington, Allegany, and Garrett Counties.

The mystery surrounding the unusual architectural character of Rose Hill is confounded by an inability to assign a definite date or builder to the house. In 1802, a Prince George's County resident, Thomas Owen Williams, bought the property (664 acres) for ten pounds per acre, an unusually high price for land in western Maryland at the turn of the nineteenth century. The previous owner, Samuel Ringgold, had inherited the property from his father, Thomas Ringgold, a wealthy merchant in Chester-town. At his death, Thomas Ringgold divided his enormous land holdings among his numerous children, giving his son Samuel over ten thousand acres in Washington County.² Samuel took over his inheritance after he reached his majority in 1791.³

Although Thomas Owen Williams owned the 664 acres in Washington County, he kept his residence in Prince George's County until his death in 1818.⁴ However, an 1808 map indicates a substan-tial house on the land.⁵ His son, Otho Williams, inherited the tract which remained in the hands of his descendants throughout the nineteenth century.

³Samuel Ringgold represented Washington County in the Maryland Assembly beginning with a seat in the House of Delegates (1795). He was elected to the House of Representatives (1810-1815, 1817-1821) from the Sixth District. Ringgold's house, Fountain Rock, was an elaborate structure (demolished) that has been attributed to Benjamin Latrobe.
