Description:

Located prominently on the northeast corner of Baltimore and Antietam Streets is this two story, three bay L-shaped brick house. It uses Flemish bond brickwork at the front elevation and common bonding at the side and rear walls. Tall jack arches are above the openings. Windows are large with six over six pane sash within narrow frames. The main entrance is in the third bay from the west end and includes an eight-panel door with delicate flanking colonnettes, a broad transom and sidelights. The roofing material is standing seam sheet metal.

Probably built in the 1820s, this house would have been contemporary with the development of the early turnpike to Baltimore into the National Pike system.

The 1877 Atlas map for Funkstown records this place as belonging to M. Williams.

Attached to the east side of this building is a one story storefront, which although remodeled may date from the early 20th century.
