Description:

Formerly the Methodist-Episcopal Church, this one story three bay brick structure is located on the northwest corner of Antietam and Chestnut Streets. Its gable end front faces onto Antietam Street. Windows have nine over six light sash within narrow frames. The two front windows have been altered into projecting bays. The main entrance is located in the central bay. A porch has been added across the front.

This was a church for the Methodist Episcopal congregation. It represents the religious history of Funkstown which was dominated by the Lutheran and German Reformed churches.
