Description:

This log house is a two story, three bay L-shaped structure covered with German siding. Windows have single pane sash windows within plain flat architraves. The main entrance is located in the central bay. An early 20th century hip roofed porch supported by square posts extends across the front. The house appears to date from the late 19th century, although datable features may be replacements of earlier ones.

A house does appear on this property in 1877 according to the Atlas map of that year from Funkstown. It was owned by E. Williams.
