Description

This house is a two story, four bay frame building with asbestos shingle siding. According to local informants it was located on Mt. Hebron Road where it served as a wagon shop from the late 19th century. It was moved to its present site in 1910 and converted to a house. The flat-topped, molded attic window architrave suggests the 1910 period renovation. Windows have two over two pane sash and the door is located off-center.

It is a typical two story frame vernacular building of the turn of the century period.
