Description

Facing north onto Antietam Drive at Mt. Vernon Lane is this turn-of-the-century frame house covered with German siding. It is a two story, three bay structure with a central entrance. Windows have single pane sash inside flat-topped architraves. A porch with turned posts extends across the front. A one story shed roofed extension is attached at the rear of the building. The property also includes a length of early stone fence along the east side of Mt. Vernon Drive.

The house reflects the turn-of-the-century period of development in Keedysville, much of which occurred at the edges of town. According to local historians, this house was built by Sam Gouff.
