Description

This stone house faces away from Mt. Hebron Road, from which it is approached. It is a two story, three bay structure, facing south, but adapted to a front on its north elevation to accommodate the road. A frame kitchen wing was added ca. 1900. The interior of the house displays characteristics from the early 19th century and also from the mid 19th century.

According to secondary sources, this building was a woolen mill where Henry Welty manufactured coverlets. In the mid 19th century, it was purchased by David Wyand who built or converted the stone structure to a residence.

The 1877 Atlas identifies the owner as William Spielman, as does the 1867 Military Atlas map. The property also included the town spring which still provides water for Keedysville today.

The property also includes a stone smoke house, barn and other outbuildings.
