

The Robert's House
211 Goldsborough Street
Easton, Maryland 21601

T-290
C1880

A showcase of the carpenter's artistry, The Robert's House was constructed about 1880 by Captain Edward Roberts, a leading figure in Easton's Volunteer Fire Department. The simple central hall building is adorned with fanciful wooden brackets, balustrades and applied wooden ornament. The central porch is flanked by two pavillions covered with roofs with flaring eaves. Parquet floors and heavily carved moldings enrich the interior.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house stands on the north side of Goldsborough Street in a residential district of large frame, late nineteenth century houses. It is west of Saint Peter and Paul's Catholic Church. There is a deep yard but no outbuildings.

The structure is two stories in height plus an attic. It has a central hall plan with two rooms on either side of the hall. The rectangular building is covered by a gable roof; there is a two story ell, two bays deep, at the west rear of the building. A one story, two bay deep kitchen with a shed roof is found at the rear of the ell.

There are two one-story pavilions on the front of the building. Each has a double window with 1/1 sashes in each. They are roofed with flaring gable roofs which face the street. The cornice and return is quite bold; ornamental brackets at the corner boards and the flaring roof give these whimsical pavilions a somewhat oriental quality. Between the pavilions is a porch. At the center is a third pavilion; its pedimented gable - with a tracery - like infill of sawn-wooden ornament - defines the main entrance and central hall of the building. Ornamental brackets are found at each chamfered square post. The balastrade is a ~~screen~~ of sawn-wooden "lace".

The second floor decoration continues the emphasis on the center seen in the center pavilion of the porch and the steeply pitched gable roof of the third floor dormer. An overlay of decorative boards, representing structural columns flanks the double center window. These "columns" even have brackets which carry the ornamental wooden "entablature" above. Similiar treatment is seen at the corners of the building. The "entablature" is an applique of wooden ornament; there is a row of small, closely spaced brackets at the eave.

Other wooden ornament derived from structural expression is seen beneath the pavilion windows and in the shaped ends of the gable dormer rafters.

The main entrance, paneled double doors with glass panes and an overlight, leads to the stair/entrance hall. Here too the carpenter's skill is seen. Parquet floors and door trim with deep, almost exaggerated moldings are found in the formal parlor and dining room. The newel of the stair is square and deeply carved. Step brackets in a stylized fan motif are used on the open-string course.

The parlor has a highly ornamental cove cornice of wood. Another use of wooden ornament is found on the round arch in the stair hall; a geometric pattern has been applied in wood to the molding.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT Captain Roberts

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house is architecturally significant for its abundant display of "carpenter's lace".

In 1879 Edward Roberts bought the eastern half of the lot acquired the year before by Annie Wrightson. Mr. Roberts was a carpenter by profession and succeeded so well in the construction of this house, which he and his wife occupied, that he was given the contract to build the Wrightson house next door and the "Bishop's House" built for the ex-governor, Phillip Francis Thomas, across the street.
