105 South Washington Street
Easton, Maryland 21601

T-9
Late Eighteenth Century

The Askins House is one of the early brick row buildings constructed in such numbers along Washington Street in the early period of Easton. Like the others it has a fine Flemish bond brick facade and tall end chimneys. The structure is two-and-a-half stories tall and four bays wide. The interior woodwork is fairly intact and a good representative of its period. Unlike most of Easton's Federal buildings this one has not been greatly changed on the first floor, apparently having escaped use as a shop. Consequently, it is one of the best preserved, modest Federal buildings in the town, despite Victorian alterations and needed repairs.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This brick Federal period house on the west side of South Washington Street is four bays wide with windows unevenly spaced across the front facade. There is a frame ell, two stories high, at the rear apparently a mid-to-late nineteenth century addition. The deep back garden is planted in boxwood.

Both the rear ell and the main portion of the house have gable roofs. On the east slope of the main roof are two shed dormers: the dormer centered above the two southern bays is quite wide, containing three windows with six over six sashes. The northern dormer has one six over six window.

The main entrance is in the second bay from the north. The entrance door with four panels seems to be a replacement. The door is flanked by lowered shutters and topped by an entablature without pilasters. Second floor windows are regularly placed: above the entrance door the window opening has been lengthened with jib doors and a plain wooden balastrade added.

Window openings have jack arches and wooden sills; two over two Victorian sashes and green louvered shutters are used at each one. Frames are unbeaded but have a back bond.

To the right of the door and between the northernmost window is an arch and a portion of relaid brick indicating a change in window placement. The northern window has no jack arch and is not lined up with the second floor window. Interior chairrail and baseboard show similiar alteration.

There are two basement window openings with jack arches in end bays. To the left of the main entrance is a cellar entrance covered with modern doors.

The front brick steps are modern. Remnants of earlier porch balastrade remain.

Possibly original, the box cornice is enriched with crown moldings and a bed molding with a line of dentils. The brick of the facade is very dark red and laid in Flemish bond with narrow mortar joints. A tall chimney is enclosed within each end wall. On the north the chimney has a corbelled cap; at the south wall which is adjacent to #107 South Washington (T-442) the chimney is stuccoed with a single projecting upper brick course.

Inside the house is two rooms wide and one deep. The stair is centered, and not enclosed. It is quite simple, but possibly original to the house. Mantles remain. First floor mantles are of the Federal type although only one appears to be original to this house.

The dwelling has been in the same family for many years and remains in use as a single family dwelling.

In a deed of 1806 the title to this property was transferred from William Harrison, the son of James Harrison, to Robert Banning for $2000.00. According to the deed, William Harrison had inherited it from his father, but no will or previous deed has been found. Certainly, the house was standing when Robert Banning took possession. Mr. Banning added to the property in 1811, about 50 feet to the north and 110 feet to the west.
