DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This gable-roofed frame house is unusual for its true 1½ story height. The south-facing three-bay facade features small windows in the half-story under the eaves line. An interior chimney heats the west end, while an exterior chimney heats the east end. This brick chimney is wide at the base, then narrows through stepped shoulders to stove-flue size above the first story. The caps of both chimneys are covered with cement.

A small, gabled porch covers the facade's central entrance. Tapered round posts supporting the pedimented gable only vaguely suggest Greek Revival influence. Six over six windows framed in plain flat boards flank the entrance. Another six over six window lights the half-story to the left of the east chimney.

Modern composition shingles cover the roof. Asbestos shingles sheath the walls. A gable-roofed brick structure standing about 4' tall, appears c. 20' east of the dwelling. This building is not positively identified, but it appears to be a well cover.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The unusual 1½-story height, Greek Revival entrance, and chimneys large enough to accommodate fireplaces suggest a mid-19th century date for this building.
