This two-story frame farmhouse is unusual for its six-bay length. On the south-facing facade, a cross-gable spans the two central bays. The central entrance includes sidelights and a transom. A front porch covers the four right-hand bays.

Six over six windows light the house. The cross-gable is lit by a small four-pane window.

The house is heated by an interior brick chimney which emerges from the gable roof just west of the cross-gable. A one-story frame addition adjoins the west end.
