This one-story gable-fronted commercial building faces south at the intersection of Maryland Route 765 and Armory Road. It is an early twentieth-century commercial building, and perhaps was always intended for use by an automobile business. It is a framed building with corrugated sheet metal siding and a standing-seam sheet-metal roof. There is a metal stove flue at the northwest corner of the building. The gable-end facade is dominated by an entrance for cars that had paneled folding doors. Pairs of six-over-six, double-hung-sash windows flank and surmount this opening. There is a similar vehicular bay on the west side that is also flanked by domestic windows.
