SM-196
Neal's Hill
Maddox vicinity
Private

Circa 1790 and later.

Neal's Hill is highly significant as one of the few eighteenth century dwelling houses located in the Chaptico district of St. Mary's County. Although both the interior and exterior of this modest house's main block have been sheathed with modern fabric, the period character of the structure remains intact. Owned by Philip Key prior to 1821, this tract was identified as Lot No. 6 in the Land Commission Record which divided Phil Key's land among his heirs. It was not until 1905 that the property was referred to as "Neals Hill."

The earliest section of the house is the western most wing. A full basement below this wing reveals its pit-sawn floor joists. The exterior brick chimney and chimney pent on the western elevation of the wing is especially interesting. Henry Chandlee Forman published a photo of this chimney in his 1934 edition of Early Manor and Plantation Houses of Maryland. The one-story kitchen wing on the east end of the house is remarkable for its interior which is little changed. This wing retains its original dirt floor and large cooking hearth.

Neal's Hill is located at the end of a dirt road on a rise in the landscape on the east side of Route 238 just north of its intersection with Manor School Road near Maddox in St. Mary's County, Maryland. The Wicomico River is visible from the house site. A small man-made pond is located at the base of the site next to Route 238. The house is surrounded by old tobacco fields now planted with soybeans. Four outbuildings stand on the site. Neal's Hill faces north with the principal gable oriented on an east/west axis.

Neal's Hill is a one-and-a-half story frame structure consisting of three building periods. The earliest of these is the western most two-bay section of the house which has a continuous brick foundation and a fully excavated basement. The two-bay wing to the east constitutes the second building period which is supported by brick piers. The one-story addition on the east end of the house constitutes the third and most recent building period. Neal's Hill is sheathed with artificial siding and roofed with both corrugated and seamed metal.

The north (main) elevation of the first and second building periods' first floor is obscured by a full width enclosed porch supported by a cinderblock foundation. The porch is lit by eight one-over-one sash windows and a modern entrance door. The upper half story of each of these sections is pierced by a large gable roof dormer lit by one one-over-one sash window. These dormers were added in the 1980s. The one-story wing to the east of the house is lit by one six-over-six sash window with wide, plain surrounds.

The east elevation of the one-story wing is lit by one six-over-six sash window. Between this addition and the building's second building period stands a common bond brick chimney. The gable end of the second building period is blind.

The south elevation of the one-story addition is pierced by a five-panel door. An enclosed porch stretches across the first floor of the second building period which is pierced by a modern door and two picture windows. A shed roof porch supported by square posts extends across the first floor of the house's western most section. This earliest section of the house is pierced by a partially glazed entrance door.

The west elevation of the house is a flush gable end lit by two one-over-one sash windows on both the first floor and upper half story. A substantial 3/1 bond exterior brick chimney with a pent on its southern side stands against this elevation. The pent is pierced by a window opening. A frame shed located to the north of the chimney provides access to the basement.

St. Mary's County
7.1 Description

The walls of the excavated basement under the earliest section of the house are comprised of both mortared brick and stone. The floor joists visible here are both hewn and pit sawn. Below the chimney is a brick arch fitted with a wooden shelf. There is no evidence of a flue here, suggesting that this arch was simply a structural device. The foundation underneath the second building period consists of continuous brick. The floor joists visible here also appear to be pit sawn. Brick nogging is visible between the walls of the house.

The interior of the house has been significantly reworked. The interior of the earliest section of the house consists of one room. A closet on the south side of the hearth provides access to the pent. A winder stair to the upper half story of the house is located at the south end of the room. A four-panel door provides access to a closet located underneath the stair. The second building period also consists of one large room. A hearth, now fitted with a wood stove, is located on the east wall of this room. A six-panel door opens to a closet on the north side of the hearth, while a modern door on the south side of the hearth provides access to the one-story kitchen wing. This wing is located two steps down from the main block of the house. The wing has a dirt floor and the interior walls consists of random width planks, some of which are 1.5' in width. A firebox measuring 6'3" in width by 4'2" in height is located on the west wall of the kitchen. A large wood beam acts as the fireplace lintel. Two metal fixtures project from the interior corners of the hearth which probably originally served as supports for a cooking armature.

8.1 Significance: Chain of Title

The St. Mary's County Assessment Records reference the Hill property as MRB 145/64. This deed refers to a parcel which is only 2 roods, 15 perches, and 4 7/12 acres in size, but is described as "Neal's Hill" or "Lot No. 6." The chain for a much larger portion of "Neal's Hill" or "Lot No. 6," also owned by the Hills, is also included here.

early 19th century

Built and enlarged in the first quarter of the 19th century, Neale's Hill began as a 1 1/2-story, one-room dwelling with attached kitchen (now gone). The addition is a three-bay, 1 1/2-story block with a large room across the front and a small stair hall and unheated room behind it. The new parlor was trimmed with elaborate woodwork and the older rooms were redecorated in a simpler version of the same style. The west end chimney has a single pent to one side. At the east end of the building is the base of a large H-shaped chimney, now enclosed in a new kitchen addition.
