Laurel Grove
Private

mid-19th and early 20th centuries

This log tobacco barn of V-notch construction was built in the mid-19th century, with a shed added to the east soon afterwards. The barn was rebuilt in the early 20th century by George Washington Burch, leaving only the roof and plates of the earlier structure in place. The other logs were used as posts for shed additions on the north, west, and south.
