

D-626
Rose Hill Tenant House
East New Market
Private

Mid-19th Century

This two-story frame house, now covered with asbestos and greatly altered from its original form, was built as a tenement house by Samuel Webster, the owner of Rose Hill farm. It probably predates the other houses on this street, possibly dating to the 1840s. Rose Hill (D-14), now demolished, was one of the finest Federal period houses in the county, and Rose Hill farm was the largest farm in the area.

ADDITIONAL ARCHITECTURAL OR STRUCTURAL DESCRIPTION:

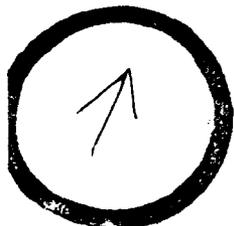

2½ story rectangular house with one story addition. The building is covered with wood siding covered with asphalt shingles. The building which is covered with a asphalt gable roof with exposed rafters is four bays wide and one bay deep. The building appears to have been constructed from salvage material because it has a mixture of windows including 6/6, 4/4 and 2/2. The main entrance is located in the second bay and is covered with a pedimented one bay wide entrance porch. Inside brick chimneys are located at each end of the roof.
